THE OBSEQUIES OF GENERAL WORTH.

IMPOSING PROCESSION.

DEDICATION OF THE WORTH MONUMENT.

Address of Mayor Wood.

The remains of the gallant and lamented Gen. [illegible] were yesterday deposited under the ground [illegible] which the Monument to his memory is to be [illegible]ected, with appropriate and imposing ceremonies. [illegible]ey lay in state, in the Governor's room at the City [illegible]all, during the preceding night, guarded by twenty-[illegible]ight men—four from each company—of the 71st [illegible]egiment. The night was divided into seven [illegible]atches, upon each of which four men were appointed to stand guard. The sentries were relieved every [illegible]o hours in the beginning of the night, and afterwards at the end of every hour. Lieut. BUNCH, Company F., had charge of these arrangements, and Lieut. [illegible]AYMOND, Company E., was assistant officer of the [illegible]uard.

The coffin was placed upon a platform near the [illegible]indows opposite the door of the central apartment. [illegible] great many people visited the coffin during the [illegible]ay, but at midnight the doors were closed. The [illegible]ties of the guard of honor yesterday were arduous, and they deserve great credit for the manner in [illegible]hich they performed them. A large crowd assembled in front of the doors of the Governor's room early yesterday morning and clamored for admittance. At 8 o'clock the doors were thrown open and [illegible] room was soon filled with people. A great many [illegible]es visited the coffin during the morning. Visitors [illegible]entering the room were told to pass between the [illegible]in and the windows, from left to right, and pass [illegible] through the west room. All who neglected to re[illegible]ove their hats were soon reminded of their [illegible]ness by the sentries.

The coffin was of solid St. Domingo mahogany, and was covered with black silk velvet, heavily mounted with silver bullion. The handles were of chased silver. There were four silver shields, two on each side of the coffin, inscribed respectively, "Niagara," "Chippewa," "Florida," and "Monterey." There was silver bullion fringe around the top and silver lace around the borders. At the head of the coffin was a circle of thirty-one silver stars, and the letters "U. S. A." were written on the other end. In the centre was a silver plate of solid silver, inscribed

GEN. WM. J. WORTH,
DIED AT SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS,
May 7th, 1849.
AGED 55 YEARS.

Just below the plate was a masonic emblem also in silver. The raised platform upon which the coffin rested was of black silk velvet, covered with bands of silver lace, diagonally crossed with silver stars in the centre of each square. The effect was very fine. The dimensions of the outside coffin are 7 feet by 21 inches. At 10½ o'clock the doors were closed for a short time, while a daguerreotype of the coffin was taken as it stood, with the military coat, chapeau and the sword which Gen. WORTH used in the Mexican war, placed upon it. When the doors were again opened, the crowd outside had largely increased. Capt. HICKS, with two platoons of 20 men each, from the Sixth and Thirteenth Wards, was on duty in and about the room, and found great difficulty in keeping the crowd back. Many thousand persons had inspected the remains, when at 11½ o'clock the catafalque arrived, and the coffin was borne down stairs and placed upon it. The catafalque was prepared by Mr. HENRY WILSON, by order of the Committee of the Common Council, who had the funeral arrangements in charge. It consisted of a square platform, from which sprung a canopy elevated about twelve feet from the ground, beneath which, upon a bier placed upon the platform, the coffin rested. The entire structure was covered with black cloth ornamented with silver stars and lace. On each side of the bier the silver lace was arranged so as to form a shield with a black ground in the centre, upon which was placed the single letter "W" in silver. Black ostrich plumes waved at the top of the canopy and at each corner of the platform. On each side of the latter a number of warlike emblems were arranged. There were drums and muskets, brass twelve-pound howitzers, all centering about a heap of cannon balls, and all covered with crape. There were American flags projecting obliquely at each corner of the catafalque, draped in black. The vehicle was drawn by sixteen gray horses, each covered with a heavy black housing and with black plumes fastened above their heads. Behind the catafalque the horse which Gen. WORTH rode in the Mexican campaign was led by a colored man. The animal, which is over twelve years old, and a dark bay, is rather below the medium, size. The horse was caparisoned in the same trappings which he wore on the field of battle. In the Governor's room the distinguished guests invited to be present were assembled. The relatives of the deceased also met there. Among them were the widow of Gen. WORTH, Mr. WM. J. WORTH, his son, Mrs. SPRAGUE and 2 children, Miss MARGARET WORTH, Miss JOSEPHINE WORTH, Mr. and Mrs. JAMES KIRD, Cadet HENRY WORTH, the Messrs. MCKEON, Mr. and Mrs. GILBERT, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. BACON, Mrs. EMMA BRIGHT and 2 sons, eight members of G. A. WORTH's family and twenty members of Mr. EDWARD's family. The crowd in the Governor's room after the coffin was taken down and placed in the catafalque was very large. The four swords presented severally by the President of the United States, the Governors of New-York and Louisiana, and the citizens of Columbia County, N. Y., to Gen. WORTH, were exhibited and elicited a great deal of admiration.

The following articles were put in a copper box at the City Hall, to be placed with the remains beneath the monument:

Address of ISAAC FERRIS, D. D., LL. D., with the Fourth Report of the Surgeons of the Surgical Department of the University of New-York.

The balcony in front of the Governor's room was crowded, a large portion of those upon it being ladies. The crowd in front of the City Hall was very large, and the Police had great difficulty in keeping those who composed it in their places. People would press forward into the open space which the Police had cleared, and the latter would force them back again. The catafalque, around which Company F, 71st Regiment, kept guard, was the centre of attraction, and engaged universal admiration.

Shortly after 10 o'clock A. M., the various regiments and companies composing the First Divison of the New-York State Militia began to assemble on the Battery. The day was intensely cold,—by far the coldest of the season,—and so piercing in its frigidity that overcoats and thick gloves and boots were but small protection against its rigors. The various regiments formed into line, and stood almost motionless for a while, and then each man clapped his hands and stamped his feet to restore the almost suspended circulation,—then they went right-about face and marched two abreast; then they formed again into line, then they stamped their feet again, and those who were able, half a regiment at a time, disappeared from the Battery and found the nselves washing down sandwiches at the Washington. But, one by one, regiment after regiment, and company after company, kept pouring into the Battery, till the ground was filled.

The first division, under Major-General SANDFORD's command, numbered about 6,500 men in line. The formation was made up of the brigades of General HALL, General SPIZER, General EWING, and General YATES. These were arranged in brigade line, running the entire length of both the new and the Old Battiries. At 11 o'clock General SANDFORD appeared upon the ground and received Governor KING, who was accompanied by the officers of his staff, including Generals BRUCE, WARD, and SEWARD. The line of review was taken up and each of the four brigades was reviewed separately. The lines were then thrown into column, and took up the course of march through Broadway into Chatham-street, and thence into the Park, passing the City Hall, on the right of which Governor KING received a marching salute from the entire division. In passing out of the West gate Col. WETMORE threw the columns into line, the right resting on Murray-street, and, as the columns advanced, the lines were in continuous formation until the entire left was reached. The left then being in front, which is the order on funeral occasions, the division broke into column and passed up Broadway through Fourteenth-street, thence through Fifth-avenue to Twenty-third-street, where the columns were again deployed into line and halted, whilst the funeral procession approached and passed on to Madison-square where the grand ceremony occurred. Here the military were dismissed, except the 71st Regiment. The admirable arrangement of General WETMORE, Inspector of Division, commanded general commendation.

The following was the order of procession, on the arrival of the military at the Park:

Along the line of march, large crowds of persons were collected, and at the junction of Broadway and Fifth-avenue, where the monument is to be erected, a numerous, but not very large assemblage, awaited the arrival of the procession and commencement of the ceremonies. It was expected that these would begin about 3 o'clock, but it was not till 4¼ o'clock that the head of the procession reached the spot. While waiting for its arrival, the spectators entertained themselves with an inspection of the monument in its present condition.

It is now only five or six feet above the ground, having a foundation of twelve feet. The granite of which it is being built was quarried at Quincy, Mass. When completed, it will be fifty-one feet high, with a base of fifteen feet square. On the front panel of the die will be an equestrian portrait of General WORTH, in bronze. On the shaft will be a trophy of arms, composed of the implements of war captured at the prominent encounters in which he was engaged. There will be four bands on the shaft, inscribed with the names of the battles in which he distinguished himself, viz.: Chippewa, Lundy's Lane, West Point, Perote, Florida, Monteray, Vera Cruz, Puebla, Cerro-Gordo, Buena Vista, Contreras, San Antonio, Cherubusco, Molino del Ray, Chepultepec, City of Mexico. The artist of the monument is Mr. JAMES G. BATTERSON.

The ceremonies at the monument were somewhat hurried in consequence of the lateness of the hour. The box of relics was first placed under the corner-stone of the monument. The coffin was then removed from the catafalque, and placed at the entrance of the cell, which was constructed in the foundation, at a depth of five feet below the surface of the ground. Here Dr. VINTON read a portion of the funeral service of the Episcopal Church. The Reverend Doctor was a cadet at West Point, under the command of General WORTH, and officiated at the first funeral of the deceased in this City, and at Greenwood Cemetery, in 1849.

The Masonic Ceremonies were next in order. The Grand Lodge; F. and A. M., formed in the following order:

The Masonic address was delivered by Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Marshal ROBERT MACOY to the following effect:

RESPECTED FRIENDS: We have come together this day to discharge a melancholy yet imperative duty. We have come to pay a debt of justice, and to render appropriate honors to the memory of a man who devoted his life to the advancement of his country's glory.

We appear in the distinctive character of Freemasons to assist in the ceremonies appropriate to this occasion, of placing within the dark and silent tomb the cold remains of a hero, a patriot and a man, and of taking a last farewell of them; in life he was one who was as much distinguished for his virtues as a Christian, and his noble deportment as a gentleman, as he was for his gallant and glorious achievements as a soldier; it therefore behooves us as an ancient, honorable, free and enlightened confraternity to bring our purest offerings to grace his memory, and to bedeck his tomb with a garland of gratitude.

At the time he was smitten by the angel of death, a great and mighty nation was clad in the habiliments of mourning, and his loss was deeply felt,—all feeling that a great man had fallen in Israel. And thus it should be; for when a truly great man passes from earthly scenes, his loss should be mourned, his memory honored, and his virtue emulated. His merits, then, most fittingly adorn the pages of history; the deeds of the great and good of every nation constitute the richest moral legacy that can be transmitted to posterity. It is, indeed, a Divine element in our nature which prompts us to do homage to the great and the virtuous.

The Masonic fraternity has always been among the first to render honor to the memory of the brave and self-sacrificing men who have devoted their lives to the cause of American freedom; therefore the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of the State of New-York most cordially accepted the invitation extended to them by the Common Council of this City to assist in the ceremonies attending the obsequies of our late brother this day, and dedicate this monument to his memory. We, therefore, with pride and pleasure, unite with our fellow-citizens in paying the last and highest tribute of respect

"To the memory of departed WORTH!"

Notwithstanding his many eminent and meritorious qualifications, there are none which so fully impress us with sentiments of gratitude, on this occasion, as the fact that WILLIAM J. WORTH was an honored member of our Ancient and Honorable Order; therefore, in compliance with a long-established custom among our confraternity, we shall now proceed to dedicate this enduring testimonial with Masonic ceremonies. Let order and silence prevail.

DEDICATION CEREMONIES.

The R. W. Deputy Grand Master, acting as Grand Master, then commenced the Dedication as follows:

G. M.—(To the Deputy G. M.)—Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, what is the proper jewel of your office?

D. G. M.—The square.

G. M.—Have you applied the square to those parts of the foundation stone which should be squared?

D. G. M.—I have, Most Worshipful, and the craftsmen have performed their duty.

G. M.—(To the S. G. W.)—R. W. Senior Grand Warden, what is the proper jewel of your office?

S. G. W.—The level.

G. M.—Have you applied the level to the foundation stone?

S. G. W.—I have, Most Worshipful, and the craftsmen have done their duty.

G. M. (to J. G. W.)—Right Worshipful Junior Grand Warden, what is the proper jewel of your office?

J. G. W.—The plumb.

G. M.—Have you applied the plumb to the several edges of the foundation stone?

J. G. W.—I have, Most Worshipful, and the craftsmen have done their duty.

G. M.—The craftsmen having skillfully and faithfully performed their duty, I declare the foundation stone of this monument "well formed, true and trusty."

The Right Worshipful the Grand Chaplain then offered up a most impressive prayer, to which all the brethren, as if with one voice, gave the masonic response, "So mote it be."

The Acting Grand Master now took the vessel which contained the corn, from the hands of the brother to whom it was intrusted, and delivered it to the Grand Marshal, who, in turn, presented it to the M. W. (acting) Deputy Grand Master; the last-named officer pouring the corn on the ground, said:

"May the Giver of All Things bestow his blessing upon all patriotic and benevolent undertakings; and plenteously confer upon this people that virtue and wisdom which shall enable them to preserve and transmit to succeeding generations the privileges they enjoy."

The cup which contained the wine was in like manner delivered to the R. W. Senior Grand Warden, who pouring the wine on the ground, said:

"May the Grand Ruler of the Universe grant long life and continued health to the officers of our National, State and Municipal Governments; preserve the Union of the United States, and may it be a bond of friendship and brotherly love that shall endure through all time."

The cup containing the oil was next delivered to the R. W., the Junior Grand Warden, who, pouring the oil on the ground, said:

"May the Grand Master of the Universe shelter and protect the widow and the orphan; shield them from the trials and vicissitudes of this world, and so bestow His mercy among the bereaved that they may know sorrow no more."

The Grand Master then said:

"The corn is used as the emblem of plenty. May the blessings of bounteous heaven be showered down upon us, and may our hearts be filled with gratitude. The wine is used as an emblem of joy and gladness. May our hearts be made glad by the influence of Divine truth, and may virtue flourish as the vine. The oil is used as an emblem of peace. May peace and harmony, good will and brotherly love, abound among men throughout the world; and may this monument long continue as a memorial of affectionate gratitude to one who devoted his life to the best interests of his country."

The Right Worshipful, the Grand Chaplain, then pronounced the benediction.

After the termination of the masonic ceremonies flambeaux were procured, by the light of which Mayor WOOD read to the assembled crowd, the following address:

"We come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him."

We come in the name of the people of New-York, representing its corporate interests, to perform a mournful duty—the last sad ceremonies of depositing beneath this stone all that is left of the mortal remains of one of the noblest and most cherished sons of the Commonwealth.

It is, indeed, a mournful occasion—not only in the performance of these rites, and the personal remembrances it recalls—but in the contemplations and reflections it involuntarily forces upon the mind.

It has been said that the disappointments in life are great, and the successes tragically few. Whilst this may apply to men in the aggregate, history and observation teaches that the SPECIAL MAN may make conquests from time—surmount difficulties—and attain the goal of his ambition. The sorrows, the trials and tribulations of the GENERAL MAN result from the confidence reposed in, and the deferred hopes of, the ETERNAL TO-MORROW: while the triumphs of the SPECIAL MAN may infallibly be traced to his earnest action in the ever-living present—in the realities of the TO-DAY.

Time is always capricious and often deceitful. To the youthful it is full of hope and golden promises. In the aged it fosters those fond anticipations, but prolongs their realization; and, while human expectation is most sanguine, it coquets with our hopes, and, it may be, flits from our grasp.

The force and reason of these remarks are happily illustrated by the life and example of that exalted citizen whose memory we now celebrate; to whose public virtues and public services we pay homage, gratitude and honor. With him there was no to-morrow in life. He was truthful to his instincts; to his nature, and his public career displayed the unceasing activity of an ever-present to-day.

A brief recital, however imperfect, of the leading incidents in his eventful, useful, and well-spent public life, cannot fail of being interesting to a portion of my auditory from old associations—must give satisfaction and gratification to the patriotism of us all—and should excite the ardor of the youthful to the noblest ambition, by emulating the example of a man whose career was so singularly marked with unsullied glory and unspotted personal respect.

WILLIAM JENKINS WORTH was born March 1, 1794, in Hudson, Columbia County, in this State. His childhood was passed upon the banks of our loveliest river, fittingly characterized as the American Rhine;

Where Nature, nor too sombre nor too gay,
Wild but not rude, awful yet not austere, might well ennoble the aspirations of a youth whose bosom was fired with genius and patriotism. While yet in his eighteenth year, and when the peace of Europe and America was perturbed, he entered, in 1812, the military family of MORGAN LEWIS, as private Secretary to that estimable General. His life was not destined to be long spent in idle inactivity. He was already thirsty for fame—already longing to be engaged in the service of his country; and the realization of his aspirations were not long deferred.

We were then upon the eve of a national disruption with England. The war of 1812 commenced—that war by the proclamation of which, the United States assumed a bold, defiant, and independent attitude among the nations; and which resulted in a practical assurance to the world, that wherever our flag floated, there the American citizen (no matter where he might first have beheld the sunlight) should be protected, free from insult or molestation, in his independence! It was in maintaining the national assertion of those principles that young WORTH first fleshed his sword. He accompanied Gen. LEWIS, in the Spring of 1813, and, about one year after he had entered his service, to the frontiers of Canada, having received the commission of Lieutenant in the United States Army; he was present and took part in the attack upon Fort George, on which occasion he distinguished himself with such intrepidity and gallantry, that he was appointed aid-de-camp to his friend and patron. The battle of Chrystler's Field, on the St. Lawrence, soon followed. General LEWIS was sick and confined to his vessel when the day of action arrived. But our youthful soldier was resolved upon not being an idle spectator. He solicited, and received, permission to join the field-army then commanded by General BOYD, whom he served as volunteer aid-de-camp. In this engagement he won fresh honors. His bravery and courage were warmly and favorably spoken of in the official report. He was already an established favorite—one that excited hopes of future promise and future glory.

When General LEWIS recovered from his illness, and soon after the battle of Chrystler's Field, he was assigned to command in the City of New-York. WORTH's amiable disposition, the genial qualities of his heart, and his fine military ardor, won for him a place not only in the esteem, but in the affections of General LEWIS. He was, indeed, regarded by the latter as one of his own family. And, accordingly, we find him writing from this City, June 15, 1814, to Lieut. WORTH, requesting the latter to come and "fill up the vacancy" occasioned by his absence. "If laurels"—he adds, doubtless, with a proud knowledge of the martial flame which burned in the young man's bosom, and cognizant of the choice he would make—"if laurels are your object, you have a better chance of being gratified where you are than here,"—and of course he remained.

The resolution to remain where glory could be achieved was readily formed—without difficulty, hesitation or equivocation. The lioness springs not more eagerly to the protection of her young, than the patriotic and martial heart to the defence of his country's liberties and independence! "Having"—he writes, in declining the kind and generous invitation of General LEWIS—"having participated in three months' fatigues of the camp of instructions: THE ENEMY BEING WITHIN SHORTER DISTANCE, separated only by the Niagara, which we cross on the morrow, AND THE BATTLE FIELD IN VIEW, will, I trust, excuse my choice. The campaign promises to be a stirring one, and you, I am sure, would not pardon my leaving." There is in this letter the ring of the true metal. Gleams of its author's future distinguished and honorable military distinction is seen in it; and it may be readily conceived that it brought gladness—a full heart and melting eye—to the brave old soldier for whom it was designed.

There is an eminent man residing in New-York to-day, upon whose cheek long may the rose of health continue to bloom, at the very mention of whose name the American heart beats quick with pride, and who must be always ranked among the first military heroes of this or the past generation, who, more than once, bore testimony to the bravery, chivalry and daring of General WORTH. Yes, associated in our country's history with the memory and services upon the field of Generals WASHINGTON and JACKSON, must be that of WINFIELD SCOTT, one of whose aids in 1814, and then in his twentieth year, was WILLIAM JENKINS WORTH. To have merited and won the approval and encomiums of that veteran commander, is not among the least honorable distinctions of the marked life of the latter. He bore an active and distinguished part in the battle of Chippewa, relative to which General SCOTT wrote in his official report: "I cannot close this account of meritorious conduct without mentioning the great services rendered me by those two gallant young soldiers, Lieutenants WORTH and WATTS, my aids. There was no danger they did not cheerfully encounter in communicating my orders, and their zeal and intrepidity won the admiration as they had before the esteem, of the whole brigade." Such high and encomiastic commendation was not without its merited effect. Lieutenant WORTH was brevetted a captain for his gallant conduct in this affair.

On the 25th day of July, 1814, was fought the memorable battle of Lundy's Lane. There the chivalrous WORTH was present; and there, as upon former perilous occasions, he signally distinguished himself. The engagement was fierce and bloody; but he shrank not from that post of duty which was assigned him, in the hour of his country's peril. "The conduct of Captain WORTH, my aid-de-camp," officially writes General SCOTT to the War Department, was marked with his usual skill and gallantry. I had already received much benefit from his services, when he received a wound, at the moment believed to be mortal, IN THE ACT OF PASSING THROUGH A BLAZE OF FIRE TO COMMUNICATE AN ORDER. His conduct in this second affair will not only bear a comparison with his own services in the first, BUT WITH THE SERVICES OF ANY OTHER OFFICER OF HIS RANK IN EITHER ACTION."

From the effects of his wound Captain WORTH did not soon recover. It lamed him for life, and confined him to his bed and room twelve months. When he was able to walk beneath the sunlight again, peace was restored, and security dwelt within our borders. But our War Department, acting in the spirit of a free and liberal government, was not unmindful of the valued services of its servant. Captain WORTH had no high-sounding pedigree—no hereditary or noble lineage to commend him for promotion to his superior officers—but he had talents, bravery, and signal military ardor, which, he well knew, under the republican institutions, in defence of which he shed his blood, were the only true and safe passports to fame. In consideration of his services and distinguished conduct in the battle of Lundy's Lane, he was made a Brevet Major.

The brilliancy and effectiveness of WORTH's genius were not confined to the battle field. He was a man, by the very constitution of his nature and character, calculated to be of public usefulness to whatever sphere of life his attention might have been directed. He loved activity, and despised sloth. He placed no confidence in that which was vague or indefinite; idle he would not consent to be; and he never left until "to-morrow" undone that which could be accomplished "to-day." He was always preparing for possible or contingent emergencies, not because he necessarily anticipated danger, but in order to insure public safety and security.

What I have here remarked is borne out by the fact that from 1815 he passed through various military grades—first as major commanding the corps of cadets; then as instructor of tactics, in which capacity he served ten years; and next as lieutenant-colonel of ordnance. In 1838, he was promoted to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the eighth infantry, in command of which he was successfully engaged upon the Niagara frontier, in quelling the patriot war, instigated by the somewhat notorious insurgent, BILL JOHNSON. Here he carried out with remarkable firmness and popular satisfaction, the instructions of Government—his demeanor, affability, and personal dignity, imparting confidence to the early settlers upon the frontier of our State; while the public services which he had rendered, and the professional activity which he displayed, inspired them with respect for his patriotism and capacity.

In 1840, he accompanied his regiment to Florida, there to encounter the fierce hostility of the native tribes. His well-known energy and skill commended him to the favorable notice of the War Department, and consequently, soon after his arrival, he was placed in command of the army operating in Florida. By consummate tact and the celerity of his movements, he succeeded in bringing the hostile chiefs, WILD CAT and HALLECK FASTINUGGE, to battle on the 19th of April, 1842, in the Pilicklickiha Hammock. It was a battle waged with a savage foe and fought with savage ferocity. The conflict was bloody and protracted, commencing with the rising sun, and ceasing not until sundown. But the hostile bands were defeated; the Pilicklickiha Hammock was to them more than another Waterloo; their fierce and barbarous spirit was there effectually quelled. It was their last struggle; and from that day forward the peaceful settlers of Florida—their wives and daughters, their old women and old men—were free from insult and violence; were enabled to pursue their agricultural or commercial vocations, in comparative safety and security.

The war, after seven years' duration, was then brought to a close by the skill and gallantry of Col. WORTH; and, as an evidence of our Government's appreciation of his services, in this campaign, he was promoted to a Brevet Brigadier-General in the United States Army. His commission was placed in his hands by President POLK, who improved the occasion by thanking him in flattering and happy terms, for his great exertions—unwavering fidelity—and unswerving determination, to advance the glory and prosperity of our country.

Four years of profound peace ensued, which, with his wonted and characteristic caution and prudence, General WORTH devoted to the training and fitting of his regiment for those fields of glory in which our arms were soon to be victorious. The wisdom of this line of conduct was soon made evident. The year 1846 found us engaged in the Mexican War. General WORTH, in command of his regiment, was ordered to Mexico, where he soon won fresh laurels and inscribed his name in immortal history. For three days he encountered, in command of his own regiment, and first division, the enemy before Monterey; and on the third day he had the satisfaction of triumphantly marching, at the head of his forces, into the city. This battle was but the prelude to the unbroken chain of our victories in Mexico, and in consequence of the perseverance which he displayed therein, WORTH was brevetted Major General.

The glorious achievements of our army in Mexico now followed in rapid succession, the story of which is so recent and familiar to all, that to enter, at this time, into a detailed account of the martial events which then transpired, would be but repeating what you have heard more than a thousand times, in centennial addresses and political orations. Nevertheless, it would not, perhaps, be amiss to observe, that wherever danger was to be encountered—a foe to be conquered or honor gained—there General WORTH might be found participating in the fray. At the head of his division he was distinguished in the siege of Vera Cruz. In the great battles of Cerro Gordo, Cherubusco, Molino del Roy and Chepultapec, he added fresh laurels to his garland. And as he was first to receive the surrender of Monterey, so it seemed reserved for him to receive also the surrender of the City of Mexico, when that capital was subdued.

At the conclusion of the Mexican war, Gen. WORTH was ordered to the department of Texas, and there, on the 7th day of May, 1849, he expired. He died esteemed and regretted by all who knew him; admired and venerated by his countrymen, and leaving behind him the record of a career so brilliant that I doubt whether the life of any other officer in our army, at the present time, or in the past, presents a more extensive list of battles in which he had participated, and which belong to the history and fame of our nation.

The immortality of a soldier's name, whose public life is as marked and distinguished as that of General WORTH, and who has rendered so many services to his country and his race—does not necessarily depend upon the homage his successors may pay, nor upon the monuments which they raise, to honor his memory. The fidelity of his unswerving patriotism—the unsullied integrity of his personal character and the unquestioned force of his military genius have inscribed his name indelibly upon the page of our country's history. Yet the desire to thus commemorate the good deeds of the dead, who have been distinguished in life, is one of the noblest and most exalted passions of our species. But in death and in life alike, it was the fortunate lot of General WORTH to have been made the favored recipient of public honors.

Thus, among other tokens of the nation's gratitude, the State of New-York presented him with a sword in 1838, to testify its appreciation of his distinguished services in the War of 1812. The Legislature of Florida voted him unanimous thanks for having closed the Indian war there in 1842. The citizens of Hudson and Columbia County, presented him with a complimentary sword in honor of his distinguished gallantry at Monterey; and the State of Louisiana did the same for his brave conduct throughout the Mexican War. In 1848, the National Congress ordered a sword for him, upon which was engraved an appreciative notice of his public services. It was now the palpable duty of the Emporium of the Empire State—the Queen City of America—to testify, in a substantial form, her regard for one who devoted thirty-six years of active public life to the advancement of his country's glory, and who was one of the most eminent and brave of the sons of New-York.

When it was ascertained that Major-General WORTH was dead, a Committee from the Corporation of the City of New-York was commissioned to visit the widow of the deceased, and charged to assure her, that in case she would surrender to us his remains, a monument, not unworthy of his fame, would be here erected, to, in some degree, perpetuate his name.

In a spirit of characteristic good sense and conjugal devotion, the request was complied with; the remains of the illustrious departed were conveyed to this City, and deposited in the receiving vault, at Greenwood Cemetery, in a manner creditable to Metropolis and a state whose greatness and prosperity claimed, in his affections, the highest place. But, up to the present moment, the remains of Major-General WORTH have been unburied. There was no spot, honorable to the wealth and magnificence of this emporium, or worthy of the public services which he had rendered, to which his widow and children might repair, to pay the last homage of love to the fidelity of the husband or the virtues of the parent. But, from this day forward, the pilgrim of his genius and patriotism may here kneel in thankfulness, reverence and admiration, at his shrine. The youth of our country, passing and repassing this monument, will hereafter pause to peruse the record engraved thereon, of the virtues, services and fame, of a man whose life presents a beautiful illustration of the institutions of our country, having raised himself from civil life to the highest rank known in the army; and every gradation in the chain of his elevation having been due to the fidelity of his adherence to professional duty. The life of General WORTH is, indeed, an exemplar which young men might well emulate, for its strict truthfulness of duty to himself, his country, and his God, as a conditioned being in Time.

At the conclusion of the address, the stone intended to close the mouth of the cell in which the coffin was deposited, and on which

THE WIND AND STREAM.

From the Atlantic Monthly.

A brook came stealing from the ground;
You scarcely saw its silvery gleam
Among the herbs that hung around
The borders of that winding stream,—
A pretty stream, a placid stream,
A softly gliding, bashful stream.

A breeze came wandering from the sky,
Light as the whispers of a dream;
He put the o'erhanging grasses by,
And gayly stooped to kiss the stream.—
The pretty stream, the flattered stream,
The shy, yet unreluctant stream.

The water, as the wind passed o'er,
Shot upward many a glancing beam,
Dimpled and quivered more and more,
And tripped along a livelier stream,—
The flattered stream, the simpering stream,
The fond, delighted, silly stream.

Away the airy wanderer flew
To where the fields with blossoms teem,
To sparkling springs and rivers blue,
And left alone that little stream,—
The flattered stream, the cheated stream,
The sad, forsaken, lonely stream.

That careless wind no more came back;
He wanders yet the fields, I deem;
But on its melancholy track
Complaining went that little stream,—
The cheated stream, the hopeless stream,
The ever murmuring, moaning stream.

NILE NOTES.

WONDERS OF ANCIENT ART.

EGYPT, February.

We left Dakkeh at midnight, or a little after, of the 30th day of January.

Were I writing descriptions of all that I have seen in Egypt, I would linger a long time in sketching this temple of Dakkeh, which is in excellent preservation, and is one of the finest specimens of the later temples of Egypt which now remain,

Possibly there may be some readers of this letter who will be sufficiently interested in the subject to authorize me for once in describing one of these wonders of ancient art. I will take the risk of doing so

Approaching the temple in front, the traveler sees rising before him two lofty towers, built of hewn stone, without windows, rising to a height of sixty or eighty feet. At their bases they may be each about eighty feet broad, and the walls recede as they rise, so that the summits are much smaller than the bases. The two are connected by the gateway of the temple, which is between them, and the outside of all is covered with sculpture in relief, of gods and kings innumerable. Each of these towers contained within it four chambers, one above the other, and the stones are smooth, and polished as they were two thousand years ago. Passing through the gateway the visitor finds himself in the court of the temple, once surrounded with lofty walls, perhaps with rows of columns, all now fallen. Crossing the court he enters the temple itself. In most of the large temples of Egypt this portion is reached through a portico on which all the treasures of ancient art were lavished. Gorgeous columns supporting elegant capitals, which in turn supported architraves that were carved in every form of hieroglyphic lore, stood in rows often four deep, and behind them a lofty doorway opened into the holy of holies.

Not so the temple at Dakkeh, which is but small. The entrance from the court is into the first of a succession of chambers, on all which art has expended itself. Every inch of the walls is covered with sculpture, beautifully executed, and standing as fresh and sharp as on the day it was finished. The first room opens into a sort of corridor, which opens into the ancient adytum, or holy of holies. But a later monarch has erected an addition to the temple, in the rear, and cut a doorway to it, so that this is the rear chamber, and is perhaps the most perfectly preserved of any room in Egypt. I might except a small sepulchral room, which opens on the eastern side of the old adytum. It was once a grave, doubtless, of some priest or prince, long since rifled of the treasure of dust it was holding for the resurrection. But the robbers left the walls of stone, and the lion sits calmly over the empty sarcophagus, and the gods stand where they stood a thousand years ago. Every part of this chamber is exquisitely sculptured, and the sculpture remains astonishingly perfect. I took impressions of many of them on paper, and the face of one of the heads of Isis was well worth preserving. It was another strange scene, that in this little room at midnight. MOHAMMED, one of the sailors, my constant attendant, held the candles. Another reached up the paper to the walls, stretching his arms to the utmost, while I applied the water and the brush, and when it came off our three heads were bent down together over the loose stone that lay in the bottom of the tomb, while we examined the work.

The next morning we reached Gerf Hossayn, one of the most interesting points on the upper part of the river.

As we came up to the shore our boat was surrounded by a hundred Nubians, as wild-looking rascals as our eyes had seen in Egypt. Their reputation was particularly bad, and we had been warned to be careful of them. We were met with a demand for payment for the privilege of landing. A swarthy fellow, six feet high, and naked at that, demanded it, literally at the point of the spear, but got a tremendous thrashing on the spot, and retired somewhat the worse for his valor. The exhibition of pistols and guns which we carried on shore had manifestly a very salutary effect, for the people retired before our procession, though they closed in behind us and followed us up the hill to the doorway of the temple. Here our thrashed friend renewed his insolence, and we could scarcely avoid a row on the spot. But placing two of our own men with guns at the entrance of the temple, we informed the black crowd of beggars that they had orders to shoot the first person, large or small, who attempted to enter, and thereupon we passed an hour very quietly in examining the sadly ruinous remains. It was somewhat like Abou Simbel, being cut out of the solid rock. In the large hall which is entered from the front, are six colossal statues, each of which is elegantly painted, and the colors remain fresh and brilliant. Behind each open space between the statues is a niche in which three figures are seated. Passing through this elegant hall, once magnificently beautiful, you enter the second room, of which the ceiling is supported by four square columns, and beyond this is the adytum, with altar and four seated statues behind it, waiting vainly, as they have waited so many centuries, for worshipers.

After satisfying our curiosity here and taking more sketches, we came to the door where the scene had by this time become somewhat exciting. MOHAMMED had grown over valiant, and I was just in time to see him clinch a Nubian and throw him into a heap of stone, the debris of ancient columns that stood in front of the temple. Then ensued a scene! The crowd surrounded the unlucky sailor, and would have made mincemeat of him if voices would have done it. All shouted at once, and all shouted defiance, but our appearance at the door had a most startling effect and decidedly calming, especially as it was aided by the presentation of sundry revolvers. Weapons are of great value, in fact an absolute necessity to travelers in the East, not for use, but for show. They are terrible arguments to Arabs. Obviously they had a charming effect on the inhabitants of Gerf Hossayn. But there was one individual not to be quieted by argument. He was the same who had received his dues in the morning, and who was exceedingly busy in growling and inciting the people to make an attack on us. At length his insults became intolerable, and I determined to settle him finally. A firman from the Viceroy did not authorize me to be a governor or administrator of justice, but it was sufficient protection for my purposes, and self-defence fully authorized all that I proposed to do. Two of the sailors caught him in a twinkling on a word from me, and before he could catch his breath he lay at full length on his face in the court of the temple, his astonished compatriots gazing in wonder and terror from the outside, while one man sat on his neck and another on his legs, and a third administered such a beating as will last him for a year to reflect on. Did he howl? Of course he did. When did Arab or Nubian fail to howl if you beat him? He made the air ring with his voice, and it was just that that had a salutary effect on the crowd outside. They heard and trembled when I told him that it was but a prelude to what ABDUL RAHMAN would give him and his fellow-villagers when he should hear from me. The terror of the Government was before their memories. It was within the time of some very young persons among them that the predecessor of ABDUL RAHMAN had burned their village, carried away their children and slain their men without mercy, and for a trifle too. Their reputation was bad. They began to beg for mercy, and the scoundrel on the ground begged loudest of all. I let him up at length, and he sneaked away in the crowd, and I saw nothing more of him. We walked down to the boat, the whole village following us, and on the bank we were surrounded by hundreds of men, women and children who watched our departure with shouts of defiance or of fun, we could not tell and did not care which.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN ITEMS.

COMMERCE WITH AFRICA.—Memorials from the Leeds and Bradford Chambers of Commerce on the commercial resources of Africa were presented on the 5th inst. by Lord GODERICH to the Earl of CLARENDON. Lord GODERICH, in reply to his constituents, says that the Secretary for Foreign Affairs gave very satisfactory assurances as to the intentions of the Government. "Dr. LIVINGSTONE," he said, "would proceed to Lisbon with the strongest recommendations both to the King and Government of Portugal, and he assured me that he would receive the hearty support of our Minister at that Court in his efforts to secure the freedom of the navigation of the Zambesi, and the utmost facilities for commercial intercourse with the interior of Africa." The Earl of CLARENDON, Lord GODERICH says, was impressed with the necessity of encouraging the growth of cotton in Africa; he further remarked in regard to the renewal of the slave trade on the West Coast, that the British Government was in communication with the Government of the French Emperor on that subject.

The Court Journal says: Although it is yet too early to discuss the ceremonials to be observed at the marriage of the Princess Royal with Prince FREDERICK WILLIAM of Prussia, yet our readers may be assured the ceremony will take place at the Chapel Royal, and that the arrangements adhered to at the nuptials of her Majesty and the Prince Consort will be the model for the proceedings at the wedding of the Princess Royal. The court will leave Windsor early in January, and will take up its abode at Buckingham Palace. After the marriage, the royal pair will retire to Windsor Castle, and, remaining there a week, will return to town to receive the public congratulations of the court on their union. This is at present the arrangement, but it may be greatly modified, or even altered, should there be any serious change in the health of the King of Prussia. In the case of a fatal result, everything would depend on the time when it took place; but should matters progress as at present, our readers may depend that the course we have indicated will be the one followed.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND HER AUNT.—A correspondent of the Puritan Recorder gives the following reminiscence of a visit to the house of Rev. Dr. RAFFLES: "After tea he took us into his study, and showed us his library of 15,000 autograph letters. We saw a letter of CALVIN, MARY Queen of Scots, of CROMWELL, letters of every sovereign of Europe from HENRY VII. to VICTORIA, a sweet little note, dated 'Windsor Castle, 1839,' addressed 'to my dear aunt on her birthday,' wishing her many returns of this anniversary, and 'begging to lay at her feet the accompanying bracelet and portrait of myself,' concluding with a petition for the richest blessings, and 'so prays your affectionate niece, VICTORIA R.'"

APPALLING DISASTER.—Advices from Paris, under date of Nov. 2, state that the Department of Marine had just received intelligence of a serious disaster. A vessel belonging to the Imperial Marine, which had been fitted out for a scientific expedition, charged with the duty of rectifying existing inaccuracies, and correcting the surveys of the coasts of the Caspian Sea, was lost on the very eve of returning home, after having devoted one year to the most careful and exact scientific explorations. Every soul on board except one went down with the wreck. The loss, deplorable as it is in other respects, will be principally felt in a scientific point of view.

AUSTRIA AND GREAT BRITAIN.—The London Star says: "If the Paris correspondent of the New Prussian Gazette speak the truth, we have to make a very startling announcement to our readers, namely, that in the month of June this year a convention was entered into between the Austrian Government and that of Queen of Great Britain, to the effect that in case of a revolutionary outbreak in Italy, Austria may rely for the protection of her dominions on the friendly services of Great Britain! Of course we shall refuse to give credence to a piece of news of this kind until it comes to us in an official shape."

THE LATE DUCHESSE DE NEMOURS.—English papers report the death of the Duchesse DE NEMOURS, at Claremont on the 28th ult. She was a daughter of the Duke FERDINAND of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, and was consequently cousin of her Majesty and the Prince Consort. Her Royal Highness was born in 1822, and married in 1840 the Duke DE NEMOURS, by whom she has had four children—the Count D'EU, the Duc D'ALENCON, the Princess MARGUERITE, and, after an interval of eleven years, the infant whose birth has preceded by only a few days the untimely decease of its illustrious mother.

THE LEVIATHAN'S ANCHORS.—The experiments in order to test the anchors selected by Mr. BRUNEL for the Leviathan, steamship, were carried on for several days, at the hydraulic proof-house, Woolwich Dockyard. The result has proved that the anchors selected were capable of sustaining a strain much above the ordinary proof. The first anchor broke at a strain of 94 tons, in consequence of defective workmanship; but the second anchor, weighing four tons, sustained a strain of 101 tons, when it broke, from the power of the pressure, which was 90 per cent. over proof.

A NEW LOCOMOTIVE.—At Moscow, lately, great curiosity was excited by an experiment being made with a new description of locomotive, running along the street, and so constructed as to cause the wheels to lay down a sort of wooden rails as they advanced. The locomotive dragged after it a number of carts, heavily laden. The experiment, though the first made, has perfectly succeeded. The author of the invention is a trader of Moscow, named PROKHOROFF.

Count ORLOFF, son of the well-known Russian diplomatist, who took part in the conference of Paris, and who is now in France, is about to marry Madlle. KATINKA DE TROUBETZKOI, youngest daughter of the Prince of that name, now residing near Fontainebleau. Count ORLOFF is a captain in the Russian army, and was seriously wounded during the campaign in the Crimea.

The Agamemnon commenced discharging her portion of the Atlantic Electric Telegraph cable, at Devonport, on the 3d inst. She had 1,250 miles of the cable, of which she can discharge about 35 miles in every 24 hours, it will therefore take six weeks, working night and day, to land her portion of the cable.

A rumor has been floating about the neighborhood of Printing-house-square to the effect that Mr. RUSSELL, the historian of the Crimean war, is about to start at once for India, acting as representative of the Times with the army, and transmitting letters to that journal by every mail.

The Madrid Gazette contains a notice from the Board of Trade that no foreigner will be permitted to enter Spain unless provided with a passport, duly signed by the Spanish consul or consular-agent in the country from which such foreigner may come.

The magnificent piece of ordnance sent as a present by the citizens of Boston to the people of Piedmont for the fortifications of Alessandria was placed on the Piazza Reale of that town on the 28th ult.

CALAMITIES.

Particulars of the Loss of the Steamship Opelousas in the Gulf—Seventeen Lives Lost.

The New-Orleans papers give particulars of the loss of the Opelousas. The Crescent says:

At a late hour last night we learned that a collision had occurred between the steamship Galveston and Opelousas, in the Gulf about midway between Berwick's Bay and Galveston, by which the Opelousas was sunk in about fifteen minutes after the accident. The collision took place shortly after midnight of the 15th, and when most of the passengers were in their berths.

Some 53 are known to have been saved, most of whom reached the city last night by an express train of the Opelousas Railroad. Many of those saved are much injured.

The Galveston now lies in Atchafalaya bayou with four feet water in her hold, she having been disabled by the collision.

The Picayune gives full lists of lost and saved:

Captain WASHBURN, of the Galveston, being sick at Galveston, was not on board his steamer at the time of the disaster. The officer in command of the Galveston, at the time, was Captain JERE. SMITH.

All of those who were rescued from the sinking steamer of course saved nothing from the fatal wreck, and were brought to the city without money, clothing or anything else. Several of them are at the City and Arcade Hotels, where they are receiving the greatest kindness.

SINKING OF A FLEET OF COAL BOATS—100 LIVES LOST.

The Cincinnati Commercial of the 23d says:

"Our special correspondent telegraphs us from Louisville on Saturday night that the steamer Republic, Captain STEWART, had arrived from St. Lewis. She reports that sixteen coal boats (the same that descended the Falls last week for the Memphis and New-Orleans markets) were sunk during the storm early on Wednesday morning, in the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, in sight of Cairo. The weather being exceedingly cold, night dark, and the river unusually rough, only twenty of the men were saved. It is supposed that at least one hundred men were drowned! The steamer Highflyer, Captain T. T. WRIGHT, reports encountering the storm in the Mississippi River, between Hickman and New-Madrid. She passed three other sunken coal boats near Hickman. The steamer H. D. Newcomb reports six boats as the number lost at that point. She passed up after the Highflyer.

This fleet of boats are owned by the Messrs. WATSONS, MORRISON & MCCLUSKY, FAUCETT, MILLER, O'DONNELL and others, of Pittsburg, who have no insurance. They were all large, extra-rigged boats, and carried a crew of two pilots and twenty men to each pair—each boat averaging 16,000 bushels of coal. As near as we can learn, twenty boats were lost, containing three hundred thousand bushels of coal, worth, at least, $200,000. The loss of life is deplorable, and will bring sorrow and distress to numerous families. The crews were principally from Pittsburg and Louisville, and the vicinity of the Falls.

EXPLOSION OF STEAMER CATARACT—TWELVE PERSONS KILLED AND FIFTEEN INJURED.

From the St. Louis Democrat.

We have to record a distressing accident to the Lighthing Line packet Cataract, Capt. O'NEIL, which resulted in the loss of five lives, and the scalding of 15 more persons. The disaster occurred on the 17th instant at Lisbon, a small place below Glasgow, on the Missouri river. The only information we have in relation to it is contained in the following telegraphic dispatches, received in this city last evening

The following persons were scalded:

Wm. THE EXPLOSION OF THE MONONGAHELA BELLE

From the Louisville Courier.

The Monongahela Belle, a small steamboat, running between Columbus and the Coal Mines, was blown up on Saturday, as she was ascending the river. Her starboard boiler exploded, blowing JOHN NELSON from the hurricane-deck down to the fore part of the lower deck, badly bruising and scalding him. He was struck just above the eye, by a piece of iron kettle, from the cook-room, leaving an indelible impression.

The cook was blown through the cook-room into the river, and was rescued from a watery grave by the life-boat.

Two of the firemen (white men) were so dreadfully scalded and blackened that it was difficult for some time to determine whether they were white or black.

W. NELSON, who was at the wheel, escaped unhurt.

The B. Belle, which was near, promptly went to her aid, the officers rendering every assistance in their power to render their condition comfortable.

The cook and firemen were taken on board of the E. H. Fairchild, lying at Columbus, and carried on to the hospital at Paducah.

Mr. NELSON returned to Hickman.

The accident is supposed to have been occasioned by the water in the boilers getting too low.

Destructive Fire at Rochester—Loss over $100,000—Two Firemen Killed.

From the Rochester American, 21st.

The following are the losses by the fire of last evening:

Eagle Bank block, owned by Mr. JAMES CHAPPELL, valued at $100,000. Insured $22,500. The lot is worth $40,000, and Mr. C.'s loss is probably over $25,000. The building was erected in 1835 and opened in 1856. It was every way an elegant structure, and an ornament to the city.

The Eagle Bank lost its furniture, counters, &c., say to the amount of $2,000. No insurance. The papers and money were in the vault, which stood above the stairway entrance, and was supported on iron pillars, from the basement. The vault has stood the fire, and also the brunt of the falling walls. It is probably safe.

F. WARNER, lager-bier saloon in basement. Loss probably $400.

O. A. HYDE & Co., gentlemen's furnishing store. Much of the property was removed. Loss considerable, probably twice as much as the insurance, which is $4,000.

Mr. PALMER, jewelry store; a few clocks were in this store, and the property was mostly removed. Some of the jewelry was in the safe and was owned by Mr. PROCTOR.

JOHN DISBROW, tobacconist. Loss $2,500; fully insured. The goods were principally removed from the store; those in the third story were destroyed. Mr. DISBROW had $1,500 in money in his safe, which he removed.

Genesee Valley, New-York and Erie Railroad Express Office. Goods and papers all saved. Some $3,000 or $4,000 in money and jewelry are in the safe.

HENRY H. MANSFIELD. Barber-shop—saved all his goods—lost only the wall papering and gas fixtures. Loss $100; no insurance.

A. SEROCO & Co. Daily Democrat office. Insurance $5,000; loss probably $20,000. The Democrat has been completely burned out; has lost every press, type and fixture in their establishment.

DANFORTH & TERRY, law office, lost their furniture. Valuable papers were in a safe, which is somewhere among the ruins.

J. B. BENNETT, law office, lost everything; no insurance; deeds, mortgages, notes and accounts, and papers all burned up. Mr. BENNETT's loss is very heavy, and will prove of a most embarrassing nature, as the papers of an extensive law and collecting business are destroyed. The loss cannot be estimated, and it may show itself through a term of years. There was no safe in his office.

JOHN H. DEY, late publisher of the Genesee Evangelist, lost his office. The type, cases, &c., were owned by Mr. F. STARR. Loss about $500. No insurance.

THOMAS H. ROCHESTER lost the small brick building next south of the Eagle Bank block. Insured $1,000. Loss mostly covered.

Commercial Bank Block lost furniture, counters, &c. The loss on building is about $5,000.

C. UPTON, Notary, lost clothes and furniture—$250.

A. H. MCVEAN, his room-mate, loss $200.

HUSBAND & SHURTLEFF, banking office; lost furniture, &c; papers and funds all safe in the vault. Loss $600.

S. B. RAYMOND, insurance agent, lost papers, policies, and $60 or $70 in money.

Fire Engine No. 2 was stationed in rear of the buildings, and took suction from the canal. Here the terrible tragedy was enacted, which destroyed two lives.

A ladder was raised to the roof of the old stone warehouse, on which several firemen were stationed. Suddenly the east wall of CHAPPELL'S block fell, and a portion of it came crashing down upon the warehouse burying in the ruins PATRICK HAVEY and WM. CLAYTOR, members of No. 2. HAVEY was a married man, and a moulder by occupation. CLAYTOR was a youth of 19, and had no family. The bodies were taken to the City Hall, where the inquest was held. The Court-House bell, after the death of the firemen, was tolled for nearly three hours.

Miscellaneous Items.

As nearly as can be ascertained the number of persons out of employment in the city of Trenton is 360, and there are dependent upon these about 1,000 persons. Of these about one third are now in need of assistance, and of the remainder, many will shortly require help if they do not now receive employment. The large manufactories are all in operation, and employing their usual complement of hands, but it is believed that a number will be discharged about the 1st January. The manufactories of knit goods are about to be closed, which will throw about 600 persons, mostly females, out of employment.

The Sumter (Ala.) Democrat, says: "The annual tide of emigration to the West has fairly set in. Hardly a day passes that we do not see perfect caravans of wagons, men, women and children, and frequently considerable numbers of negroes, going through our streets on their way to seek new homes. Some go to Texas, others to Louisiana, and others still to Arkansas, while some of them stop in our neighboring State, Mississippi.

The Port Jefferson Tragedy.

In the evidence taken at the Coroner's inquest in the Port Jefferson tragedy, which we laid before our readers yesterday, the main facts of this terrible affair were succinctly stated. We dispatched a special reporter on Monday to the scene of the occurrence to collect additional particulars. The distance from this City to Port Jefferson, by railroad and stage-coach, is 64 miles. It takes one or two days to go thither and return, so that the details of the affair, collected by our reporter, have but just reached us.

THE HISTORY OF THE PARTIES.

HENRY WALTERS, the murderer and suicide, was born and brought up at Jericho, L. I. He was a housebuilder by trade. When a young man, a charge of seduction was brought against him by a young girl living in his native village. He strenuously denied her accusation, but ultimately married her, though he never lived with her. Her child, a daughter, it is said, is still living. The mother died many years since. WALTERS afterwards went to New-Orleans, where he amassed considerable property; he returned to Long Island and built himself a splendid mansion at Huntingdon, intending to settle there. But shortly after the building was completed it was destroyed by fire. WALTERS felt the loss severely. He returned to New-Orleans, was again successful, and soon after returned to the North and married the lady whom, on Saturday, he so cruelly murdered. He was 57 years old at the time of his death.

Mrs. ELIZABETH WALTERS was a daughter of DANIEL SMITH, an old resident of Port Jefferson, who served in the Revolutionary war. She was married in early life to MATTHEW DARLING, a well-to-do ship-builder at Port Jefferson, with whom she lived happily. She lived to be 45 years old. Mrs. MARTHA JANE STURTIVANT—for so the name is spelled—her daughter, had been married only a year. She is about 21 years old. Her husband, WILLIAM WASHINGTON STURTIVANT, was a ship-carpenter. He was in comfortable circumstances, and, by representation, an industrious young man.

THE CAUSES OF THE TRAGEDY.

Mr. WALTERS married Mrs. DARLING in January, 1854. The lady was reputed to be worth about $25,000; she owned two farms in the township of Brookhaven, in which the village of Port Jefferson is situated. One of these, after her marriage with Mr. WALTERS, was worked "on shares;" the other, upon which the family resided, and where the murders were committed, Mr. WALTERS personally superintended. Mr. WALTERS was also in comfortable circumstances. Soon after the marriage an estrangement, from some unexplained cause, arose between Mr. and Mrs. WALTERS. Whether the marriage was one of policy and not of affection, as many of the neighbors say it was, and whether dissatisfaction arose on the part of each on finding that the other had fewer worldly possessions than was supposed, does not certainly appear. A new set of harness belonging to Mr. WALTERS was found cut to pieces by some malicious person, and out of this subject some of the first quarrels arose. Then the daughter of Mrs. WALTERS became Mrs. STURTIVANT, and with her husband resided in her mother's house. Mr. WALTERS had serious disagreements with both of them. He was not on good terms with AMASA STURTIVANT, the father of the young man, who resides near the residence of Mrs. WALTERS. Mr. STURTIVANT, (Senior,) one day last Summer, entered the barn where Mr. WALTERS was feeding the pigs. A difficulty had then for a long time existed between them. "Those are fine pigs of yours," remarked Mr. STURTIVANT. "Mr. STURTIVANT," said WALTERS, "I wish you would go away from me. I don't want to have anything to do with you." Words ensued and presently STURTIVANT,—so WALTERS told the story,—suddenly caught hold of the latter and threw him down. A tussle ensued in which neither were much injured, but WALTERS claimed the victory. Since that time the enmity between them has been greater than ever, and young STURTIVANT and his wife, the mother of the latter, were frequently scarcely on speaking terms with Mr. WALTERS.

On the Saturday preceding the day of the murders, WALTERS having killed some hogs had his hands, which were sore, in the blood washing them,—it is said to be good for sore hands,—when JOHN E. DARLING, the brother of Mrs. WALTERS' former husband, observed to him "I should'nt much like to eat that after your having your hands in it." "If it was old STURTIVANT'S blood," said WALTERS, "I would dip my arms into it up to the elbows."

The story about the shroud and coffin we mentioned yesterday. WALTERS purchased these about a year ago from Mr. KING, the sexton at Port Jefferson, for the purpose, it was thought, of frightening the members of his family with the idea that he was about to commit suicide. They only laughed at him, however. He frequently said he would kill himself, and they came to disregard his threats on this subject entirely. The shroud, a white neck-cloth and white stockings which he bought at this time, were found carefully packed away among his effects after his death. Such an estrangement existed at times between Mr. WALTERS and his wife, that she refused to occupy the same apartment with him. He complained frequently to the neighbors of his treatment by the members of the family. His reputation was that of an industrious man. He did personally much of the labor of the farm, and kept everything in good order about it.

We now come to the day preceding the fatal occurrence. Young STURTIVANT was engaged for some time last Spring in the ship-building business at Cold Spring, N. Y. WALTERS made some remarks openly at different times, reflecting upon his conduct while so engaged. He said also, that while STURTIVANT and his wife were away, he (WALTERS) lived pleasantly at home with his wife, and she gave him no cause for complaint. Last Friday, THOMAS T. STRONG, Esq., son of Judge STRONG, and Mr. STURTIVANT'S lawyer, sent a letter to WALTERS informing him that STURTIVANT had directed him to commence a suit for slander against him unless he made certain retractions by Saturday night. WALTERS received this letter at 4 P. M., and immediately went to Mr. GEO. DAVIS, who keeps a store in the place, and asked him to read it for him; Mr. WALTERS either could not read, as some of his neighbors declare, or, according to others, his sight was defective and he had not spectacles. Mr. DAVIS read it to him. The closing sentence of the letter warned WALTERS that "unless it was settled by Saturday night" a slander suit would be commenced. WALTERS, on hearing this said, "It will be settled by to-morrow night." The significance of these words was not understood until the day after. It would appear that before the receipt of this letter he had not contemplated the bloody deed. The same morning he met Mr. DAVIS' son at the mill at Stony Brook, and talked with him of his property in a tone which indicated that he expected to live for some time yet. He said that he had got his corn in and his hogs slaughtered, and his wood cut, and he would live comfortably for the rest of the Winter. The same evening WALTERS at home was sharpening his razor, and finally started to go up stairs with it. "You don't intend to kill us all, do you?" said Mrs. WALTERS in a jocose tone. "No, why should I want to kill you?" was all he said, and then he left the room.

We have already related the principal facts connected with the murder itself, and the suicide afterwards of the murderer. In order to understand correctly the position of the parties,—the advantages of the assailant, and the defenceless situation of his victims,—when the fatal blows were given, the method in which Mrs. WALTERS' little son, who was in his bed-room up stairs while the bloody tragedy was enacting below, effected his escape, it is necessary to be made acquainted with the appearance and internal construction of

THE RESIDENCE OF MRS. WALTERS.

The mansion in which the unhappy family resided is a comfortable one-story and attic frame building, painted white, 45x26 feet in dimensions. It is situated on the west side of the inlet upon which Port Jefferson is built. It faces towards the east. The room in which the family breakfasted is adjoining the kitchen, at the north end of the house. There are two modes of entrance into the house, one by the kitchen door, and one by the front door in the centre of the building. A grassy knoll extends in front of the house, upon which Mrs. WALTERS received her death-blow.

THE BARN

in which Mr. WALTERS hung himself is an ordinary out-building, immediately in rear of and about half a dozen rods distant from the house. A picket fence divides the barnyard from the kitchen gar esponse, the Committee returned to the City Hall and reported progress—that is, no progress at all. There were slight marks of disapprobation. CHARLES SMITH, the poet and bill-poster, was the principal speaker. There was little new in what he said, except that he had been informed, on good authority, that many poor men had paid from $1 to $2 each to the managers among the workmen at the Central Park for chances to work, but had been deceived, and lost their money. He did not know their names, but one of them lived in the Eighth-avenue, and another in Hudson-street. Any person who would extort a dollar from a poor man, at such a time as this, should be turned out of his place. [Cries of "That's so."] The Mayor, Board of Aldermen and Common Council had done all they could, and the fault all belonged to the Commissioners of the Central Park. [Cries of "That's so."] They should employ one thousand one day, and then discharge them and hire another thousand another day, and so on. This didn't go down. He went on.—"If you don't get work this week, perhaps you will early next week, and if not then—why then the week after." [Shouts of derisive laughter.] "But do not be led away by misguided men to do anything rash; they should keep peaceful, and show that they know how to respect the laws and the Constitution of the United States. The foreign-born citizens should go to the ballot-box a week from next Tuesday and vote"—[a voice "Say Tiemann."]—"I don't advise you how to vote, or give you any name." [Cries of "Put him out."] SMITH proceeded—"A large Hall would be secured next week, where they could assemble and discuss their grievances without being exposed to the cold." [A voice—"Who'll pay for it?" Another voice—"Mayor Wood; you'd better spend your Hall money for the poor men among you."]

MR. DAVIS now took the stand, and was proceeding to exhort them to union, and to inquire who were their real friends and to search for the political cause of their troubles, when he was interrupted by the arrival of the military escort, with the remains of General WORTH, and the steps of the City Hall were cleared by the police, to allow the coffin to be borne to the Governor's Room.

Afterwards the Committee returned to the office of the Commissioners, and had an interview with them. It was agreed that they should state in writing, today, what they (the unemployed) required, and the Commissioners will respond at once. There were now eight hundred persons at work, and about one thousand upon their list. The Commissioners stated that they had requested the Chief Engineer to chalk out more work, if possible, at once. They are doing, they say, all they possibly can do to furnish employment for the really needy. They require proof, however, in the shape of recommendations from known persons, that the applicants are worthy and industrious persons, and those having families depending on them are first considered. While they pursue this course, with a wish to do justly by all, they will not be moved in the least from their line of policy by threats and intimidations.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—Nov. 25,

Before Judge Nelson.

CASE OF THE BRIG ELLEN.

On the seizure of the brig Ellen, on a charge of being connected with the Slave-trade, in May last, the sum of $1,200 in gold was found in a trunk on board belonging to Mr. Aruja, and was taken possession of by the United States officers as evidence. The cause now being in the Circuit Court on appeal, an order was entered this morning, by consent of the District-Attorney, for the repayment of the amount to Mr. Aruja, there being no reason for its longer detention.

COPYRIGHT.

William Heine vs. William H. Appleton et al.—This was a motion for an injunction. The plaintiff was connected with the Japan Expedition, and made a great many sketches as an artist. He claims copyright in them, or a part of them, and asks for an injunction to prevent the defendants from infringing it.

The motion was adjourned, on account of the absence of Commodore Perry, till next week.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Before Surrogate Bradford.

Jane Westerlo vs. Edward De Witt, sole Executor of the last Will of Catharine J. Clinton, deceased.—This matter was brought to a final hearing Nov. 24, before Mr. BRADFORD as Surrogate. The proceedings have been pending since March, 1856, and were commenced a short time after the death of Mrs. Governor Clinton. The plaintiff, as the assignee of her daughter, Miss Cornelia Westerlo, claims to recover the amount of a certificate of deposit of the New-York Life Insurance and Trust Company, which she claims that Mrs. Clinton, a short time before her death, gave to Miss Cornelia L. Westerlo for her own property. She also claims to recover other moneys disbursed by her assignor in payment of debts due by Mrs. Clinton; and also the amount of a legacy given to her assignor by Mrs. Clinton's will. The main question is as to whether the certificate of deposit can be the subject matter of that kind of disposition which in law is called donatio causa mortis. Decision reserved.

Beeves are sold by the estimated dead weight of the four quarters; the so-called "fifth quarter" (hide and tallow) is not reckoned in here as it is in Boston and some other cities. When cattle are weighed or estimated alive, the dead weight is reckoned at a certain number of pounds to the 100 lbs. of live weight, as agreed upon. The general rule in this market for medium cattle is 56 lbs. to the 100; 44 lbs. being allowed for the "fifth quarter" and offal.

The average prices to-day, as compared with last week, are about ½c. higher.

We quote:

PRICES OF BEEF AT FORTY-FOURTH-STREET.

At BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S prices do not materially differ from those at Forty-fourth-street. CHAMBERLIN reports Beeves at 7c.@10c. O'BRIEN reports Beeves at 8½c.@10c.

REMARKS ON THE BEEF MARKET.

A cold, raw and uncomfortable day made a seat by the stove much more agreeable than exposed to the bleak winds as they whistled through the cattle-yards fresh from the snow on the hills at the North and West, and the comparatively few purchasers of beef for Thanksgiving week appeared quite as much interested in the discussions of the City affairs and speculations as to who was to be our next mayor as in examining the cattle-yards for their weekly supplies. The offerings differed very little in quality and numbers from last week, being 1,743 for to-day and 2,073 for the week at ALLERTON'S. After the limited supply and advance of last Wednesday cattle began to come in, and free sales were made both at Forty-fourth-street and the down-town markets during the week, so that the entire footings give 2,890 for the week's sales. This number was enough for a poultry week like the present, and it was very difficult to clear the yards to-day of the poorer classes of cattle. Those of good qualities found ready sales at advanced prices—or, at least, more beeves brought 10¾c.@11c. to-day than last Wednesday. Common stock brought but little more than last week. The average sales were about ½c. higher than at that time. The greater part of the cattle (1,274) on sale to-day were from this State. We hope the supply will hold out, so that whenever, from accidental or other causes, the West fails to furnish the usual quota, our own State may be able to supply the deficiency. Few cattle left Albany for the East. We could not learn that there were over 200 head went to Brighton.

For further remarks upon the localities from which the cattle are derived, their quality, &c., and for particular sales and other matters of interest, see the tables below, with the special notes following. These tables and notes are generally gathered from a personal inspection of the droves mentioned.

The following extracts from our notes of sales will give distant readers some idea of the general character of the transactions:

One of the finest lots of cattle in market to-day was M. H. PARKER'S, 92 Kentucky Durham grades, weighing at home near 1,700 lbs. gross. They were from the farm of Maj. SHELBY, from whom we expect only the best-fed cattle. The yard was early visited by purchasers of good stock, and THOS. WHEELER found little trouble in getting 11c. for the best. The tailings were bringing about 10c. ₱ lb. W. BRIGGS took four of the best at $112 each, or fully 11c.

ALLERTON & MYERS were selling on their own account 92 medium cattle, purchased of FOSTER & DUNCAN, and hailing from Missouri. They were not the native Spanish, or Indian breeds frequently brought from that State, but medium grades of common stock. They rated 700 lbs. net. Fifteen head were sold for $71 each, or a little less than 10c. The lot would range from 9c.@10c. ₱ lb.

W. H. BELDEN had 20 of his own Dutchess County cattle, for which he was getting about 10c. They were of fair quality.

MEAD & HOLCOMB sold 59 Dutchess County cattle of their own for 8c.@10c. A few brought 10½c. They were a mixture of light steers to heavy oxen, weighing 1,000 to 1,100 lbs. net.

W. W. HOAG was getting 10c.@10½c. ₱ lb. for 24 of his own Dutchess County stock, rated 750 lbs., and of good quality.

WESTHAIMER & BROTHER sold, on their own account, 40 State cattle, estimated 650 lbs. net, at about 9¼c. Quality fair.

L. R. CROCKETT brought in 51 light Ohio steers and heifers, the home weight of which he called 1,200 lbs. gross. We should put them below 600 lbs. net here. I. BUDLONG was getting 8c.@9c. for them. They were a common lot.

A. G. PIERCE offered, through J. HOXIE, 17 Wayne County, N. Y., steers, of medium quality, which brought 8c.@9c. ₱ lb. Rated 650 lbs. net.

S. SIDNER sold 60 of his own Madison County, Ohio, Cattle, common, but in fair flesh, at an average of $45 each. They were light, rating at 550 lbs. net. A portion of them were wholesaled to SHEPPERD & VAIL who retailed them at about 9c.

ALLERTON & CONGER sold on their own account 60 very fine Dutchess County Cattle of large size, estimated at 950 lbs. net. They classed as No. 1 to-day, and brought 10c.@11c. ₱ lb.; buyers say more.

C. EDMONDS contributed 34 common light Illinois steers, estimated 550 lbs. net. W. H. HARRIS got about 8c. for them.

J. C. HOAG had 40 of his own Dutchess County cattle, of various weights and different degrees of goodness. They brought from $50@$112 each, or 8c.@10c. ₱ lb.

GEO. SAGE sold here and at Bergen for different parties 102 Ohio and New-York cattle of divers qualities at 7c.@10c. ₱ lb.

W. SHERMAN was selling 24 of his own Dutchess County cattle at 8c.@10c. They ranged from medium to good quality.

C. G. TEED had a small lot of 15 good Westchester County cattle, for which he got 10c.@10½c. ₱ lb.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and vary greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $30 to $40, or $50. Quite a number sell above $50, and more, perhaps, below $30. We often see apologies for Cows go at $20@$25. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations.

The supply of cows has been short for the past week, and good ones have advanced in price. There is a more active demand, although large numbers are not required at this season, when only milkmen are purchasers.

ALLERTON reports receipts of no fresh cows during the week. There is an increasing demand for them, and good ones will find a ready market at fair prices.

BROWNING reports receipts of 15 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $30@$40 for good, and $50@$65 for extras. The supply has been short, with a fair demand for good Cows at advanced prices.

CHAMBERLIN reports 72 Milch Cows, selling at $20@$25 for common; $40@$50 for good; and $50@$60 for extras.

O'BRIEN reports 36 Milch Cows, selling at $25@$30 for common; $35@$45 for good, and $50@$65 for extra. The supply is short, with a more active demand. A slight advance has taken place in price.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. "Bobs"—that is, Calves a few days old—are usually sold by the head at such prices as can be agreed upon, sometimes for but little more than the skin is worth. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S and O'BRIEN'S.

The receipts have fallen off very much during the past week, but as Pork is supplying the place of Veal in the wants of the community, prices have not advanced.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 120 Veal Calves, selling at 5c.@7c. The supply is quite sufficient, although receipts have been lighter than usual. "Bobs" are plenty at $1@$1 50@$1 75 each.

BROWNING reports receipts of 9 Veal Calves, selling generally at 5½c.@7c. The receipts have been almost nothing, with a demand not supplied.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 72 Veal Calves, selling at 5½c.@7c.

O'BRIEN reports 34 Veal Calves, selling at 5½c.@7c.

The market is not well supplied, all the stock offered having been sold.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ₱ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, as this is readily ascertained. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reputed prices is generally due to variation in the quality. When they are sold by weight, it is usually the net weight, which is ordinarily one-half what they weigh when alive, the pelt and offal making the other half. If fat and small-boned, they will dress 55 lbs., and in some cases 60 lbs., ₱ hundred. The average run is about one-half the live weight.

The receipts of live Sheep for the past week show a gain of 2,000 over the previous week. Large numbers are also coming down the river in a dressed state and taken directly to the markets. Of the live stock a large portion are of common, light quality, and sell dull at a decline of 25c.@50c. ₱ head since last Wednesday. Pelts have improved a little. They now bring 44c.@68c. each.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 1,700 Sheep and Lambs, selling at 7c.@8½c. ₱ lb. dressed weight for Sheep, and 7c.@9c. ₱ lb. for Lambs. The markets are fully supplied, and sales very dull with a decline to-day of fully 25c. ₱ head for lambs and 50c. for common sheep. Many of the lambs are quite thin and bring $1 75 to $2 each.

BROWNING reports receipts of 5,109 Sheep and Lambs, selling generally at 7c.@9c., ₱ lb., net weight, for Sheep. Lambs bring 7c.@10c. The supply is large, especially for lambs, many of which are light and thin. Prices to-day are scarcely as good as last week, ranging from $1 25@$8 ₱ head. Very few bring the latter price.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 5,783 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $2 50@$5 ₱ head.

Wholesale Produce Markets.

Reported exclusively for the New-York Times.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, Nov. 25, 1857.

The prices given in our report from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices refer chiefly to the qualities of the articles.

Vegetables, more especially Potatoes, are advancing as the close of navigation on the Canals draws near. There are two cargoes of Nova Scotia's now, in which prices have advanced to 85c.@90c. ₱ bushel. Large quantities are on their way from the interior of the State.

Apples are in medium supply. Those now arriving from the West are in good condition. They are worth about $3 ₱ bbl. in lots of different kinds.

Turnips are plenty and cheap. They sell in baskets reported to hold a bushel each, at 25c.@31c., and form a partial substitute for the much dearer Potato.

Cabbages are not as abundant as they have been during the few past weeks. Farmers are now placing them in Winter quarters to be taken out as the state of the market warrants.

Butter is unchanged, but there is a more active trade, as the weather grows cooler.

Eggs are plenty just now, while the Winter supply is mainly coming in. Prices are firm at an advance since our former quotations. By far the greater portion of those now arriving are in lime.

The Poultry trade, in view of the Thanksgiving dinner to-morrow, is quite brisk. Poultry stands are just now the chief places of attraction, and hundreds of well-filled baskets are finding their way to all parts of the City and neighboring country, notwithstanding the hard times. The market is well supplied, and prices are moderate. Wild Fowl, Rabbits, Hares, Squirrels and Partridges are plenty. Venison is coming in more freely, and is worth about 12c. ₱ lb. by the carcass.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, Nov. 25—6 P. M.

RECEIPTS OF PRODUCE—Since noon yesterday, 26,000 bbls. Flour, 97,310 bush. and 914 sacks Wheat, 3,857 bush. Corn, 3,108 bush. Barley, 454 sacks Oats, 77 bbls. and 62 sacks Beans, 1,595 packages Provisions, 313 bbls. Whiskey, 81 bales Cotton, 12 hhds. and 145 packages Tobacco.

ASHES—Quiet at old prices. Pearls, $6 50; Pots, $7 ₱ bbl. Stock in the Inspection Warehouse, today, 1,213 bbls., including 833 bbls. Pearls and 380 bbls. Pots.

CANDLES—The demand is limited; prices are unchanged.

COFFEE—The market exhibits more animation, with sales reported, privately, of 90 bags Maracaibo at 11¾c.@12c.; 1,100 bags Rio at 9¼c.@11c.; 30 Laguayra at 11¾c., and 220 St. Domingo, for export, at 8¾c., cash. ₱ lb. We quote, Java, 15½c.@16c.; Maracaibo, 10¾c.@12c.; Rio, 9c.@11c.; St. Domingo, 8¾c.; Native Ceylon, 13c. cash, and Laguayra at 11½c.@12c. Sales were also made by auction of 917 bags Rio at 9c.@10¾c.; 459 Santos at 10c.@12¼c., and 250 packets Singapore at 9½c.@10c. ₱ lb. These sales were spiritless, and the bulk of what had been offered was withdrawn. The stock of Coffee in Baltimore, yesterday, was 71,000 bags.

COTTON—Continues quite dull, with very trifling sales reported at about 11c.@11¼c. for Middling Uplands; 11½c. for do. New-Orleans; and proportionate rates for other kinds, ₱ lb. The stock, here, is estimated at 5,800 bales, against 56,400 bales same time last year.

DRY GOODS—The Independent, issued this morning, reports the market for foreign goods unchanged. The collections on the whole are improving, and there is a limited inquiry for goods, both from first and second hands. Prices have assumed a degree of steadiness at the great reduction. The auction sales are much diminished. Stocks left on hand are still large. From Lyons we learn that the large manufacturers have been obliged to sell their stock of silk goods at very low prices, under a severe pressure, arising from the absence of remittances from this country; yet it is stated that much of the goods so bought are destined for this country. In the staple manufactured products of this country there is a much firmer tone. The near-by trade is doing better as regards purchases.

FISH—The demand is tame, and prices lean in favor of buyers. Dry Cod, $3@$3 40, ₱ cwt.; Mess Mackerel, at $9 50@$10 for small No. 1; $8 75@$9 for small and medium No. 2; and $8 for large No. 3, ₱ bbl. Pickled Salmon at $29@$32 ₱ tc., and $23@$23 50 ₱ bbl.; Pickled Herring, $3 37½@$3 87½ ₱ bbl.; and Smoked Herring at 32c.@35c., for scale, and 18c.@20c. for No. 1, ₱ box.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is brisker and firmer. The cold weather and the closing of the Canals, serve to strengthen the market. Sales—11,300 bbls.

Thanksgiving Proclamation,

BY HIS EXCELLENCY, JOHN A. KING, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

An humble sense of our dependence on Almighty God for all the benefits and bless ngs we enjoy, renders it especially proper at this time to return our thanks to the great Giver of all good for another year of plenteous harvests and general health. The promise that seed-time and harvest shall never fail has been most signally manifested during the past season, while health and contentment have dwelt within our borders For these gracious manifestations of the power and goodness of God, I recommend the people of the State to assemble together and to raise their united praise and thanks to Him in whose hands are the issues of life and death, that they have been permitted to witness and enjoy during another year the noble works of His hands—the fostering care of his goodness and mercy. To that end, and in accordance with the established usage, I hereby designate and appoint THURSDAY, the TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY OF NOVEMBER NEXT, as a day of general Thanksgiving and Praise to Almighty God, our Heavenly Father; and invite all to unite in so meet and right an acknowledgment of His power and goodness, and of our own helplessness.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto signed my name and affixed the Privy Seal of the State, at the (L. S.) city of Albany, the seventeenth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

By the Governor.

(Signed,) JOHN A. KING.

HENRY I. SHAMAN, Private Secretary.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Vanderbilt, whose important commercial advices we published yesterday morning as received by telegraph from Cape Race, is now fully due at this port, and may be expected at any moment. The Sandy Hook line was not in working order last night.

By the arrival of the Tennessee at New-Orleans we receive a telegraphic summary of two weeks later news from Mexico. The country still continued in a most distracted condition. SANTA ANA is again in the field intriguing with the opponents of COMONFORT for a restoration to power. From present appearances it would seem that the President is by no means certain of his position for twenty-four hours together, and under such circumstances it is impossible to foresee the result. A number of political exiles had arrived in New-Orleans by the Tennessee.

The United States Treasury estimates for the next fiscal year have been completed, and notwithstanding the efforts made to reduce them, the aggregate will reach about seventy millions. The War Department estimates are increased by the anticipated Mormon war, and those for the Navy by the construction of the new steam sloops of war. Secretary COBB does not apprehend the necessity of resorting to loans on Treasury notes.

Governor WALKER, of Kansas, arrived in Washington yesterday.

Navigation is now entirely closed on the Canals. The sudden change in the weather to almost extreme cold within the last forty-eight hours has had the effect to freeze over nearly the whole extent between Albany and Buffalo, and unless the weather should greatly moderate, the hopes entertained of being able to forward produce between Rochester and Albany for two weeks longer will be defeated. A large number of boats are detained in Cayuga Marsh and elsewhere between Lyons and Buffalo. The only two years on record in which navigation closed as early as the 25th of November was 1838 and 1845. In 1827 it closed on the 27th of November, but afterwards reopened, and remained open until the 28th of December. It is to be hoped that such will be the case now.

The cold weather and the reported closing o the Erie Canal occasioned a better inquiry fo Breadstuffs, yesterday. Flour advanced about 10 cents per barrel. Wheat and Corn were also dearer. The Provision trade continued much depressed, with limited sales at drooping prices. Coffee was rather more active in private. The auction sale, however, was quite spiritless, and the bulk of what had been offered was withdrawn. Sugars were in fair demand, without any remarkable change in value. Cotton was dull and irregular. Freights continued very heavy, and rates feebly sustained.

Additional disasters on the great lakes are reported. The schooner Antelope, from Chicago, for Oswego, with a cargo of wheat, was blown ashore, during the late gale, at the north of the St. Joseph River, Lake Michigan, and totally lost, with the Captain and four of the seamen, who were frozen to death. Five schooners and one bark are, also, reported ashore in Lake Erie. The aggregate losses by these disasters will be very great.

The Cattle Markets have been but moderately supplied during the week and good beeves sold at about ½c. advance at the Forty-Fourth-street Market yesterday. The better feeling regarding money matters tends to increase the demand for meat, which had run quite low during the past four weeks. Western supplies have been materially checked by the low prices prevailing on the last two or three market days and the advance in freight. Fully one-half the receipts the past week were from this State.

The ceremonies attendant upon the removal of the remains of General WORTH to the tomb prepared for them, under the monument in course of erection to his memory, at the junction of Broadway and Fifth-avenue, Madison-square, took place yesterday. The military, masonic, and civic display was most imposing, and was witnessed by thousands of persons, who congregated along the line of the procession, notwithstanding the severity of the cold. The funeral services at the monument were performed by Rev. Dr. VINTON, of Trinity Church; an interesting masonic ceremony followed, and Mayor WOOD delivered an address. It was some time after dark before the ceremonies were concluded.

At the close of the military ceremonies yesterday evening an entertainment was given by Major-General SANDFORD, at his residence, in Twenty-Second-street, to Governor KING, the officers of his staff, the staff officers of the first division and several of the staff officers of Governor NEWELL, of New-Jersey. A number of speeches were made appropriate to the occasion, which passed of with much éclat.

The straight Americans met at Mozart Hall last evening, and, contrary to the intention of the callers of the meeting, passed resolutions fully indorsing the nomination of DANIEL F. TIEMANN for Mayor. They denounced the getters up of the meeting as hirelings of Mayor WOOD; sung a song, and then adjourned with three cheers for the Independent candidate.

The American General Committee of this City met last evening, and unanimously passed a series of resolutions indorsing the union of all parties in favor of Mr. TIEMANN for Mayor, denouncing the pretended American meeting at Mozart Hall, and expressing a determination to work faithfully for a reform in our City Government. The resolutions are to be read before every council in the City.

Hon. JAMES G. BIRNEY died yesterday morning at Eagleswood, near Perth Amboy, N. J., of paralysis, aggravated by heart disease. His age was 64. Mr. BIRNEY was the Liberty Party candidate for the Presidency in 1844, in opposition to Mr. CLAY. He was an active laborer for many years in the ranks of the Anti-Slavery Party.

The Democrats of the Eighteenth Ward had a meeting last night at the corner of Eighteenth-street and First-avenue. The party nominations for Alderman and the rest of the Ward and District nominations were indorsed.

The Managers of the Hudson River Industrial School, No. 254 West Twenty-eighth street, are obliged to turn poor girls from their doors every day, because they have no means wherewith to procure food or fuel.

The Quarantine Commissioners have sent a communication to the Commissioners of Emigration, in which they express pleasure in learning that at length wiser counsels have prevailed in the latter Board. Accompanying the communication were the keys of the temporary establishment at Seguine's Point.

There were no demonstrations yesterday on the part of the unemployed, either at the Central Park, in Tompkins-square, nor in front of the City Hall.

The Commissioners of Emigration were to have met yesterday, but at the hour appointed for meeting there was not a quorum present, and they adjourned without transacting any business.

The Actual Position of the Bank of England.

The disciples of TOOKE and NEWMARCH are doubtless at this moment jubilating over the attitude of the Bank of England. For they are doubtless believing and claiming that the pressure of the present crisis has vindicated all their predictions, and proved the inadequacy of Sir ROBERT PEEL'S Bank system to the functions it was expected to perform. And we shall unquestionably hear that the session of Parliament has been opened with a concentrated and vigorous attack upon the principles of the act of 1844. We do not believe that any such attack will be successful, for the simple reason that we do not think the step to which the English Government has been forced by the bankers and the mercantile community radically subversive, either of the national credit or of the organization intended to be given to the Bank by the act in question. As this is a matter which not remotely interests our own financial world, it is important that the actual position of the Bank of England in its relations to the mercantile community should be fairly apprehended.

Down to 1844 the Bank of England was a homogeneous institution, differing from other banks in England chiefly by its financial connection with the Government, and by the enormous proportions which its capital had attained in the course of a century and a half of existence and activity. Circumstances had given it an anomalous position and a power of unquestionable utility as the unwatched watchman, the unregulated regulator of the price of money and of the national currency. In that year Sir ROBERT PEEL, assisted by the advice and information of Mr. JONES LOYD, since Lord OVERSTONE, and of other eminent bankers and financiers, cast the Bank in a new mould, with the double object of assuring stability to the currency and of controlling the financial movement of the kingdom.

The essential feature of the new Bank Charter was the separation which it established between the Issue and the Banking Departments of the Bank. In all practical aspects the Banking Department of the Bank of England is now an independent Bank, doing business on the same principles with the other Banks of London, but hampered by its connection with the Issue Bank of the Government in the following way: Under the old system no bullion was set apart exclusively to meet the circulation of the Bank. Every sovereign in the vaults of the Bank was at the disposal of the Bank Government when called for, either by general depositors or by borrowers on security. Under the new system only so much specie remains at any time in the Banking Department, as is not needed in the Issue Department to balance the excess of the Bank circulation over the amount of the Government Debt to the Bank. In 1844 this Debt amounted to £14,000,000, certified by the securities of the Government, and against this sum bank-notes might be issued. In 1856 an order in Council authorized the further emission of notes against securities to the amount of £475,000. For every pound issued by the Bank, in the form of notes, above this sum of £14,475,000, the Issue Department must hold a pound in specie. This arrangement it is which has caused the greatest dissatisfaction to the enemies of the Bank Charter Act. For it will be seen at once that the practical operation of this restriction must greatly impede the development of the Banking Department, and interfere with its natural movement, particularly in times which threaten a public panic.

The Banking Department can only show specie, of course, to the amount of the notes which it actually holds, and as the notes in the Banking Department begin to diminish, the Directors must naturally enough begin to feel concern for the Issue Department. Just here it is that the Government intervenes as in the present instance. The elevation of the rate of discount proving impotent to arrest the drain upon the Banking Department, the Treasury suspends, not the obligation of the Bank to pay specie, but that clause of the Charter which limits the increase of issues by the increase of specie. This is so clearly a measure of accommodation and relief, of which the consequences are to be determined by the temper of the public feeling and by the buoyancy of the trade of the empire, that it may seem hardly worth while to insist upon the fact. But there can be no doubt that it will be made the basis of a general criticism upon the new bank system itself, even though the actual soundness of the commercial world of Britain, of which we entertain no manner of doubt, should so affect the situation as to restore the normal action of the finances before the session is at all advanced. That criticism we believe, however, very unlikely to result in the adoption of any revolutionary reactionary measures. If a modification of the Bank Charter act is to be sought in any direction, it seems to us quite clear that it should be sought in an expansion of Sir ROBERT PEEL'S fundamental principle, so far at least as to substitute a specie basis for a considerable portion of the Government securities now lodged in the Issue Department. The complete application of that principle which would be achieved by locking up £14,000,000 of bullion additional in the vaults of the Bank is, perhaps, as undesirable as it is certainly impossible. But a part of the Government debt to the Bank might be acquitted in specie, with immense advantage to the operations of the Banking Department, and consequently with singular benefit to the whole commercial world. Neither this step nor any other practicable step would probably guarantee us absolutely against disorders which are inherent in the very constitution of credit, but it might do much to modify those disorders when they occur and to diminish the frequency of their recurrence.

The Tribute to General Worth.

On his return to England, after his Summer visit to this country, the late Earl of ELLESMERE said in the House of Lords, that if he were asked to name the most military nation in the world, he should say the United States. He based his convictions partly on his observation during his brief sojourn in this country, and partly on the spirit manifested by our people during the Mexican war. He instanced the response which was made by the different States to the proclamation of President POLK calling for volunteers for service in Mexico, and though he greatly underrated the actual facts of the case, yet his statement created surprise among his noble hearers.

The same conviction must be wrought in the mind of every intelligent and candid European who visits this country and sees the zeal and enthusiasm which are displayed by our volunteer soldiery in their holiday parades. These so-called holiday parades are, in fact, hard military service; they demand the very qualities which are essential to make good soldiers in time of actual warfare. The perfect discipline, the attendance at drills, the exposure to wet, cold and heat, and the sacrifice of personal comfort, are required to a degree almost as great as in the case of actual service. The only difference is that in one case all the services are voluntarily rendered without pay, or the hope of reward, and in the other they are forced, and to a degree mercenary.

The turn-out of military companies yesterday, to form a funeral escort to the reinterment of the remains of the gallant WORTH, was a most striking and impressive spectacle, and it could not fail to convince a stranger that there must be a powerful tendency to military life in a people who could, on such an occasion, make such an imposing display. The day was cold and gusty, clouds of blinding dust flew through the streets, and even walking out in the raw chilly air was exceedingly uncomfortable. But these volunteer soldiers came out in their brilliant uniforms, horse, foot and dragoons, artillery and infantry, sappers and miners, with all the pomp, pride and circumstance of real war, and marched many miles, halting and countermarching, and going through their evolutions like hardy veterans, and all for the mere love of military parade. It was to do honor to a gallant soldier, it is true, that they were ordered out; but it would have made no difference what the occasion was, nor what the weather; they would have obeyed the call just the same, whether it was to put down one of Mayor WOOD'S riots or to suppress a mob in Astor-place. Gentlemen who "live at home in ease" may think lightly of the services of our holiday soldiers, but whoever saw them, yesterday, covered with dust and looking as blue and chilled as though they had just come from the Winter trenches before Sebastopol, would hardly regard their services as light or agreeable. Yet such services they are called upon to perform many times during the year, and the brilliant military pageants of our streets are only produced by constant drillings, by perfect subordination to authority, by great sacrifices of private affairs, by study, great expense for equipments and, more than all, the irrepressible instincts of a manly nature, and the ardent love of a military life.

These citizen soldiers are composed of just that class of persons who, in London, have been so unmercifully ridiculed by the Times and Punch for ignobly devoting themselves to the enervating pursuits of trade while their country needed their services as soldiers in India. We do not say that the Cockney clerk would not make as good a volunteer soldier as his Yankee brother, but he is not allowed an opportunity of displaying his taste for military exercises if he should have "immortal yearnings" that way. He must either stick to his counter, or take the Queen's shilling and be a soldier and nothing else. Here, happily, we manage things differently, and the magnificent display made by our volunteer companies yesterday, shows that our citizens may be good shop-keepers, and good mechanics, and good soldiers too. Not the least gratifying part of such displays as that of yesterday, is the perfectly harmonious manner in which all the different nationalities of which our population is composed unite in a general military organization, preserving their distinct characteristics, and yet acting together in perfect accord under one commander.

INCREASE OF MENDICANTS.—During the past fortnight there has been a very perceptible and painful increase in the number of our street mendicants. There are at all times too many of these unfortunate solicitors of charity, but they have now become most alarmingly numerous, and the incessant appeals made by these people for assistance have the effect of rendering the public indifferent and callous to their plaintive cries. They give us no rest; they intrude themselves into our places of business at all hours of the day; they waylay us at the corners of the streets, at the ferry landings, at the doors of all places of amusement; they attack us as we go in and out of our houses, like Bishop BRUNO'S rats, and disturb us at our meals, by ringing at our basement entries. Feeble girls stretch out their hands, and ask for bread in the streets; little barefooted children, with their pale faces, look up from the crowded sidewalks, and in their piping voices ask for money to buy food for their sick mothers; cripples of all kinds assail the man of business in his way down town, and the gay promenaders who come out to enjoy the pleasure of shopping in Broadway are annoyed at every step by pertinacious little creatures who follow them with outstretched hands beseeching for two cents towards buying a loaf of bread,—for our street mendicants are seldom so humble as to ask for one cent. It is easy enough to deal with the robust laborer who marches through the streets with banners and music, smoking cigars and demanding bread or work; but these "feeble folk" cannot be so readily avoided. Their appeals, whether silent or spoken, are of a kind that cannot be disregarded. Yet to relieve them all is impossible; it would require the purse of a Fortunatus to satisfy a tithe of their importunate demands. They leave a most painful impression on the mind, and are among the greatest annoyances to which our citizens are subject. There are among them many worthless creatures, no doubt, who would sooner beg than work, but the greater part of them are evidently legitimate objects of charity, and their necessities should be attended to. The Police should have strict orders given them to arrest and send to the station-houses, every person, man, woman or child who may be found begging in the streets. If this were done, the really needy might be properly provided for by the public authorities, while the professional vagrants would be properly disposed of. Every citizen has to contribute too largely to the support of the poor, both by public and private taxes, to be subjected to the incessant annoyances of these mendicants who swarm in all our streets, and haunt our dwelling-houses and places of business. It would be as great a mercy to these poor wretches to provide for their wants in some of our public institutions, as it would be a boon to the public to be rid of them.

Fatal Explosion.

Mayor WOOD has more petards on hand than he can manage. One of them exploded last night, and gave him a hoist from which it will take him some time to recover.

He has been busy for several days in endeavoring to secure the nomination for an American candidate, in hope to divide the strength of his opponents. This is the only way in which he has ever achieved an election hitherto, and he was, and is, perfectly sensible that without it he has no chance of succeeding now. He began by trying to persuade Mr. COOLEY to run; but he was not successful in even obtaining a personal interview with that gentleman. Failing in this, he attempted to negotiate with him through an Ambassador, and authorized a distinguished ex-member of Congress to make him sundry very tempting propositions on the subject. The attempt, however, was a perfect failure.

Finding it impossible thus to secure the cooperation of the regular American organization, he set himself to work to form a new one. A meeting of several of his special friends among the old policemen, whom he has succeeded thus far in keeping out of the new force, was held on Tuesday night, and the result was the issue of a placard, posted throughout the City yesterday, calling a Convention of Straight Americans to nominate a candidate for Mayor. The whole thing was carefully concocted in Mayor WOOD'S interest, and the effect which it was expected to produce was clearly foreshadowed in the following paragraph, from the Mayor's respectable organ, the Journal of Commerce:

"THE MAYORALTY.—It is reported that the 'Straight-Out Americans,' opposed to WOOD and Fusion, intend making a nomination, on Wednesday evening, for the Mayoralty."

Wednesday evening came:—the Convention was held:—but the gun exploded at the breech! TIEMANN was nominated by an overwhelming majority, and with the utmost enthusiasm. We await with some curiosity the Mayor's next move.

TAKING HIM AT HIS WORD.—Though Mr. COCHRANE expressed a willingness to vote for WOOD if he were the "devil incarnate," so long as he was the regularly-nominated candidate of his party, yet the Mayor's own desire to make his election a personal matter will absolve not only Mr. COCHRANE, but a good many other staunch Democrats, from the stern necessity of voting for the incarnation of everything they abhor. As party men, bound by party usages, some few of the better part of the Tammany organization might have felt themselves under the necessity of supporting a candidate, whose nomination they tried to defeat. But there can be no such difficulty in the way now, since Mr. WOOD himself leaves them at liberty to vote for the person they may prefer, instead of the nominee of the party to which they belong. A large number of the Cochrane school of politicians, whose aversion to devils incarnate is not so strong as their sense of party obligations, will be most happy of an excuse for voting on their own hook for once at least. They can afford now to indulge in that luxury; if they do not, they cannot escape hereafter from being classed among the personal, and not the mere party supporters of FERNANDO WOOD. He has not left them the choice of making a distinction between voting for the nominee of the party and the man whom they personally prefer for Mayor. Having publicly expressed a desire that his election should be regarded as personal and not political, he will be sure to claim all the votes cast for him as so many tokens of personal respect.

THE POLICE FORCE.—A good deal of anxiety has been created by the injunction issued by Judge DAVIES against the Board of Police Commissioners, forbidding them to appoint any additional members of the Police Department except members of the old force. The object of the order, or of the application for it, is clearly to force the special friends of Mayor WOOD into the Department:—and as the hearing of the case is postponed until the very eve of the election, it is generally believed that the whole proceeding had some connection with that event.

The Commissioners, however, have taken efficient measures to provide for any contingency that may occur. They have appointed one thousand policemen for special service on that day, and we have reason to believe that they have also issued such orders to the military force of the City, as will secure the prompt and thorough repression of any disorders that may occur.

There is little doubt that the election of Tuesday next will be one of the most exciting which this City has ever witnessed. We have full confidence, however, in the ability and determination of the authorities to preserve the peace.

THE TIEMANN ORGANIZATION.—We are glad to learn that the friends of Mr. TIEMANN are working together in the most harmonious manner, and that the anti-Wood organizations are under the control of the right sort of men in all parts of the City. It was to be expected that the sudden coming together of so many discordant parties would at first lead to confusion, but there being one common object in view all minor considerations have been happily forgotten, and the whole anti-Wood force is working together with a degree of unanimity which will be overwhelming if it is persevered in. The Mayor's forces are perfectly organized and drilled, and they are not to be easily beaten; but, disciplined and determined as they may be, they are in so great a minority that they cannot overmatch the friends of the independent candidate. There has never before been a party so suddenly and so admirably organized as the anti-Wood party, and nothing but the sheerest carelessness can prevent its success.

RIDING THE PUBLIC.—The City has been sued for Mayor WOOD'S carriage hire! It seems that he ordered from one person carriages during he last eleven months, to the amount of $1,161, and directed it to be charged to the City account. There is no law or ordinance authorizing the payment o such bills, and the City has accordingly been sued. The Mayor's salary, during the last year, has been raised to $5,000, and one would suppose this sum sufficient to enable him to pay his own carriage rides. Mayor WOOD'S economy in City expenditures seems to be altogether a matter of theory.

THE SINEWS OF WAR.—The Anti-Wood organization is compact, harmonious, energetic and efficient. Measures have been taken to secure the attendance of active and resolute challengers at every poll to prevent the influx of illegal voters, which is expected from Brooklyn. Funds have been provided to meet the necessary expenses of printing, public meetings, &c., and the fact that WILLIAM F. HAVEMEYER is the Treasurer of the Organization is a sufficient guarantee that no improper use will be made of money which friends of the cause may intrust to his care.

RATHER HARD.—"It is reported," as the Journal of Commerce says, that Mayor WOOD paid the expense of the hall in which the meeting of Straight Americans was held last night. As they nominated Mr. TIEMANN, this seems rather an unreasonable draft upon His Honor's purse.

CENTRAL PARK.—In spite of the cold weather over 800 persons were at work upon the Central Park yesterday. The Italians, of whom a goodly number are employed, were the first to succumb to the cold;—they are good laborers, but not used to such a climate as that of yesterday. Men are employed now mainly in breaking stone to be used in macadamizing. The ground has also been prepared for a nursery near Seventy-first-street.

APPRECIATIVE.—The Transatlantic Telegraph Company have placed the entire supervision of the enterprise in the hands of CYRUS W. FIELD, and have appointed as its engineer the engineer of the Niagara. John Bull seems to be of the opinion that American enterprise and ingenuity are of some value in such undertakings.

PERSONAL.—Gen. HENNINGSEN is at present in this City. If WALKER succeeds in obtaining a new foothold in Nicaragua, the General will be very likely to join him.

Death of James G. Birney.

Hon JAMES G. BIRNEY, long an able leader in the ranks of the Anti-Slavery Party, died at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, at Eagleswood, near Perth Amboy, N. J. His age was 64.

Mr. BIRNEY was a native of Kentucky. His father was an Irishman, who had acquired considerable wealth, and occupied a high social position. Mr. BIRNEY received his education at Nassau Hall in New-Jersey, and at the age of 19 began the study of the law in the office of Mr. DALLAS, at Philadelphia. Returning to Kentucky in the year 1814, he commenced the practice of his profession, and at the age of 22 was elected to the Legislature of the State. About this time, also, he married, and soon afterwards purchased an estate in Alabama, where he became the owner of some thirty or forty slaves. He subsequently took up his residence in Huntsville, Ala., where he practised law with remarkable success, and gained a prominent position in political circles, which insured his election to the Legislature of Alabama. While still a resident of the South, Mr. BIRNEY'S mind was awakened to the injuries inflicted upon the servile population by the system of Slavery, and his impressions received additional strength from the contemplation of the wrongs inflicted by the whites upon the Indians. His sympathies became greatly excited, and he deemed it his duty to labor for the melioration of the condition of the classes which suffered from oppression. With this purpose in view, he abandoned his profession to espouse the cause of Colonization, a system which at that time appeared to him to offer the most feasible means of remedying the evils of Slavery. To this enterprise he brought all the resources of a vigorous intellect, and did good service for the cause. Afterwards, however, his views expanded still further, and he became an ardent disciple of the Anti-Slavery doctrines. His first step towards an earnest exposition of his sentiments was the emancipation, in 1834, of all the slaves he carried with him from Kentucky to Alabama. He then announced his intention of establishing a paper, for the enunciation of his doctrines, in Kentucky; but met with an opposition so strenuous that he was compelled to resort to publication in Ohio; in which State—now the headquarters of the Free-Soil sentiment—he was received with some degree of coldness. Before the death of his father, Mr. BIRNEY caused such a disposition of the paternal estate as to secure to him all the slaves, twenty-one in number. On coming into possession, he set the negroes free, and made suitable provision for them. Mr. BIRNEY'S wife died in Ohio, and in the year 1840 he visited England, and took a prominent part in the Anti-Slavery agitations then prevailing in that country. In 1841, Mr. BIRNEY returned, and soon after married the sister-in-law of GERRIT SMITH, a lady named FITZHUGH, who survives him.

Mr. BIRNEY'S first prominent connection with national politics was in the year 1844, when he became the candidate of the Liberty Party for the Presidency. He ran in opposition to Mr. CLAY, and received an aggregate of 58,592 votes. Mr. BIRNEY was vainly exhorted to withdraw from the canvass, but persisted in standing, although his chances were manifestly the extreme of meagreness. He resisted the overtures made to him on the ground that, in his judgment, the country would gain nothing by the election of Mr. CLAY over Mr. POLK. Since 1844, Mr. BIRNEY'S name has been rarely before the public. For some ten or twelve years he has suffered under attacks of paralysis, which enfeebled his body and incapacitated him for active labors, although his intellect remained comparatively unimpaired. Recently his symptoms have been aggravated by heart disease. His residence for several years past has been in Michigan, where he was possessed of considerable landed property. About two years since he removed to New-Jersey, under the advice of his physicians, to seek relief in change of air, and to superintend the education of his youngest son at Eagleswood.

Mr. BIRNEY formerly held relations with the American Anti-Slavery Society, and was for a time connected with LEWIS TAPPAN in the conduct of the affairs of that organization in this City; but some difficulties occurred, and his connection ceased. He had been of late years an attentive observer of public affairs, and during the last Presidential contest was a warm supporter of the Republican nominee. A number of weighty political disquisitions were produced by him, and his convictions of the necessity of a system of checks upon the progress of Slavery remained unshaken to the close of his life. Mr. BIRNEY was a man of great ability and of indefatigable energy. He has filled an important place among the men of the time, and will not be forgotten by those with whose interests his later life was identified.

The Winter has set in at the West in earnest. Navigation on the Upper Mississippi is suspended for the season. The Welland Canal is full of ice, and the Canals in this State are closed west of Rochester.

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

The Statement Relative to a Special Minister from France—Change of British Policy towards the United States—The Salt Lake Rebellion—The Treasury.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 24, 1857.

The statement that a Special Minister has been appointed by France to unite with Sir WM. GORE OUSELEY and the American Minister to Central America in the settlement of the open questions with the States comprising the latter, is discredited here—at least in the shape in which it is presented. Certainly the Government of France is well aware that the United States will make no entangling alliances with foreign powers; and, as France is in no way mixed up with our Government and that of Great Britain in the pending issues in connection with Central America, it is difficult to see what a French Minister, appointed as stated, will have to do. It is not improbable that France, on her own behalf, proposes to make a treaty with Nicaragua, guaranteeing the neutrality of the Transit route. That course our Government suggested to the Government of France some time since, while the President declined entering into any joint arrangement for precisely the same purpose.

The indications crowd thick and fast upon us that England has changed her entire policy towards the United States, and is anxious to make such concessions to our views with respect to the American Continent as will bring about the best possible understanding, and secure to her at least our moral support in her movements in the East. The appointment of Lord NAPIER, and his marked efforts, both in official and private life, to improve the good relations between the two Governments and their subjects or citizens, have afforded unmistakable evidence that the policy of antagonism which so long ruled the "mother country" in its intercourse with us, has given place to a more just and generous one.

The selection of Sir WM. GORE OUSELEY—personally so friendly to Mr. BUCHANAN, and known to be so well disposed towards the United States—has not a little significance in the same direction, especially when it is remembered that he is not a member of the party in power in Great Britain, and that he has been more than once recalled by Lord PALMERSTON from diplomatic posts.

But closely following Mr. OUSELEY to the United States came some very significant editorial articles in the leading London papers commenting upon the object of his mission, and virtually conceding to this country every point in the long pending Central American controversy. This is the present aspect even of the acknowledged organ of PALMERSTON, who for a long series of years has persistently fanned the flame of discord rising from the Central American question.

Those who have thoughtfully observed the course of these events will not start at the suggestion that the two British Ministers now here appear to be earnestly engaged in an honest effort to have every cloud cleared away from the political skies of Central America, at whatever cost. The Bay Islands question is one between England and Honduras, which our Government will leave them to settle on terms consistent with their own honor, not interfering at all so long as England manifests a disposition to abandon her colonization there in violation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty.

The Mosquito Protectorate is virtually abandoned already; and now a Minister has been appointed by our Government to cooperate with Mr. OUSELEY in Nicaragua and Costa Rica in securing a settlement of the boundary dispute, and all other questions out of which irritation can possibly arise. In all this the policy of Great Britain is to be to leave to the United States the controlling influence on this Continent, securing only to herself equal transit privileges.

It is said that in connection with this subject, the United States will probably informally agree to pursue a line of policy with reference to China that shall favor the policy of England to the extent of forcing the blockade of Chinese ports, and opening them to the commerce of the two countries; also that while England, soon as she has finished her India struggle, and transfers her forces now there to China, proceeds to acquire Territory in the Celestial Empire, the United States will be left to help herself to the naval depôts and coaling stations which we have so long desired in Eastern waters. This is a large programme, but there is good reason to believe that it is all under consideration at the present time.

The Administration have not yet decided upon any additional measure to be taken against the Salt Lake rebels. The announcement that troops are to be ordered to Salt Lake from the Pacific is premature, although the subject is under consideration as I have heretofore stated.

The War Department has been engaged for some time past in sending out recruits to the Pacific, to fill up the companies stationed there. We have a force on the Pacific Coast now of something over three full regiments, from which two regiments could be spared for operations against the Mormons.

Now, however, that the Mormons have shown their hands, and committed themselves to the policy of open resistance to the Federal Government, it is deemed doubly important that no move should be made until an overwhelming force is ready to be brought against them. This was the policy pursued by General WASHINGTON in the earlier cases of insurrection against the Government, and always resulted in quelling the disturbances without bloodshed.

It is not probable that any demonstration will be made against the Mormons from the Pacific side until the season will admit of coöperation by the force from this side under command of Colonels JOHNSTON and ALEXANDER; and even then the force will doubtless be increased to at least 6,000 men.

The Administration seem to be getting alarmed again about the depletion of the Treasury. Ten days or a fortnight ago they would not have hesitated a minute to take a Post-Office site in the Park, and commence the expenditure of the half million appropriated therefor, and for the erection of a building forthwith. But the money prospect begins to look so dismal again now that the Executive is not quite ready to close the contract, unless arrangements can be made to throw the expenditure of the money over into the next fiscal year. Your Councilmen Committee are willing to wait for the purchase money for the site, provided the expenditure for the building itself is commenced; but it seems that there is is some hesitation on the part of the Executive to promise even this. Thus the delay occasioned by Mayor WOOD'S resistance to the selection of a site in the Park endangers the consummation so much to be desired, even at the eleventh hour.

The rumor that Hon. J. GLANCY JONES of Pennsylvania, is to be appointed Mr. DALLAS' successor in the London mission, is revived in diplomatic circles. As Mr. BUCHANAN recommended Mr. JONES to the late President as his own successor, the rumor is not an improbable one.

If Mr. FORSYTH could be induced to quit the mission at Mexico, the appointment would probably be conferred upon ex-Governor RODMAN M. PRICE of New-Jersey,—but the prospect of a consummation so devoutly prayed for by the President, as is the resignation of the present incumbent, is very distant.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Treasury Estimates for the Next Fiscal Year.

Arrival of Governor Walker—The Mission of Sir William Gore Ouseley—Lieut. Maury's Case, &c.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Governor WALKER arrived here to-night.

The Treasury estimates of appropriation for the next fiscal year have been made up, and despite every effort to reduce them, the total amount estimated is about seventy millions.

The estimate for the War Department alone is twenty and a quarter millions—being largely increased by the anticipated Mormon War.

The total Naval estimates, including the special service and the construction of the new steam sloops of-war, amounts to fourteen millions.

Secretary COBB still thinks that the Treasury will not be compelled to resort to loans or Treasury notes.

Is it true or not that the sloop-of-war Saratoga has arrived in New-York? The Department has received no advices to that effect.

Lieut. MAURY's case has been commenced in the Naval Courts. S.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The statement in the London Post to the effect that Sir WM. OUSELEY has a mission to the Government of the United States, is altogether incorrect. He is simply accredited to the Government of Central America, and has come to Washington to consult with Lord NAPIER and General CASS. The interviews between the President and Secretary of State and Sir WM. OUSELEY have hitherto been merely of a ceremonious and friendly character. The object of his mission will shortly be communicated to the Department of State by Lord NAPIER.

Governor WALKER, from Kansas, arrived in Washington to-night.

To-morrow being set apart as a day of Thanksgiving, all the Departments will be closed, and no public business transacted.

Much solicitude is felt regarding General WALKER's fillibustering movements. The Government as yet has received no advices on the subject.

TWO WEEKS LATER FROM MEXICO.

Revolutions and Disturbances—Intrigues of Santa Ana—Political Exiles—Expected Fall of Comonfort.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

The steamship Tennessee has arrived here from Vera Cruz, with dates to the 21st inst., and from the City of Mexico to the 19th.

The country was in a most distracted condition, and another general revolution was impending.

Communications were passing between the Revolutionists and General SANTA ANA, whom, undoubtedly, they intend for President.

Of the passengers by the Tennessee, there are twenty-three political exiles, and among these are Ex-President SILAS JOSH WASHINGTON, Colonel ROMERO, and WILLIAM MORAN, editor of the Extraordinaire, who was imprisoned for publications against the Governor of Zacatecas.

COMONFORT's fall was considered certain, and it was thought doubtful whether his life would be spared if he remained in the country.

Effects of the Severe Cold Weather.

CANAL NAVIGATION ALMOST ENTIRELY SUSPENDED —GREAT NUMBER OF BOATS FROZEN IN, &C.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

About midnight a very severe and sudden change took place in the weather here, the wind changed to the northwest and blew a perfect gale for the balance of the night, the thermometer falling rapidly. This morning the mercury marked 11° above zero. The change appears likely to defeat the hopes entertained of keeping the Canal open two weeks longer between here and Rochester, and of the resumption of navigation to Buffalo. Unless the weather changes or moderates, canal navigation may be considered virtually suspended, although some portions of the Canal are still free from ice. Only twice before, in the years 1838 and 1845, has navigation closed as early as the 25th day of November. In those years it closed on that day. In 1827 the Canal closed on November 27, but reopened and remained navigable till December 28. A very large amount of produce is now on its way.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Nov. 25—P. M.

Advices have been received from Syracuse, Fort Plain, Utica and Lyons, stating that the Canal was frozen tight at those points. Ice-breakers are busily engaged in attempting to break a passage through, but the weather continues too cold to allow a hope of success.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Nov. 25—6 P. M.

The weather is growing colder, and there is quite a severe frost.

LYONS, N. Y., Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Navigation is entirely suspended here, and this morning the boys are skating on the ice. The weather is very cold, and gives little prospect of further navigation this season. A large number of boats are detained on the Cayuga Marsh, and along the canal between here and Buffalo.

BUFFALO, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The weather here is clear and cold. The Canal is so frozen over that boats cannot move. In the harbor there is considerable ice, and vessels experience a great deal of difficulty in moving about.

BUFFALO, Wednesday, Nov. 25—6 P. M.

Weather calm and clear and cold. The harbor is still partially open but the canal is closed.

CLOSING OF THE BEAUHARNOIS CANAL.

MONTREAL, Can., Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The weather here is very cold, the thermometer this morning marking 4° above zero.

The Beauharnois Canal has been frozen over, and its navigation so stopped for the season.

COLLINGWOOD, C. W., Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The ice in this harbor is two inches thick.

The steamer Canadian makes her last trip up Owen Sound on Saturday, the 28th inst.

OSWEGO, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The weather here to-day has been very cold. There have been no arrivals or clearances by Lake.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, Nov. 25—P. M

The weather here is clear this evening, and the thermometer stands at 21° above zero.

There is nine feet of water in the channel of the river at this point, and the water is falling.

BOSTON, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

The weather here to-day has been cold and blustering. The thermometer this evening is down to 20°.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—There will be a very attractive morning performance at this house to-day, and those of our country cousins who have never heard an opera well given may avail themselves of the opportunity with decided profit. The entertainment begins with the entire opera of "La Somnambula," in which Mme. LA GRANGE, Signor LABOCETTA, and Signor GASSIER appear. After this, Mme. D'ANGRI, the famous contralto, will sing the drinking song from "Lucrezia Borgia," and after this there will be a grand concert, in which Miss MILNER, Mr. PERKINS, and M. VIEUXTEMPS (the great violinist) take part. Altogether, it is a prodigal entertainment. Begins at 2 o'clock.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—This evening the romantic drama called "Past and Present," and the comic piece, "The Invisible Husband." In these plays the strongest and best dramatic company in New-York is seen to greatest advantage. Begins at seven precisely.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The highly successful revival, "The Sea of Ice," is the great attraction here. There will be two performances to-day: one at 2 o'clock, the other at 7.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—The Ravel Family, Mlle. ZANFRETTI, the wonderful tight-rope danseuse, Mlle. ROLLA and the ballet troupe, appear here to-day in two entertainments—the first commencing at 2 o'clock, the second at 7½. A comic pantomime, a ballet, and a spectacle piece, intermixed with tight-rope and other exercises, are the usual attractions at this admirably-conducted establishment.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—The comic drama of "Paris and London" will be played here this afternoon, at 2 o'clock, (with Mr. BURTON in the principal part,) and again in the evening, and will be followed in the latter instance by a new local piece called "A Day in New-York."

BROADWAY THEATRE.—The eminent English comedian, Mr. CHARLES MATHEWS, is the attraction at this house. His reputation is world-wide, and what is better, thoroughly deserved. He appears in three pieces to-night.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—Two performances here to-day; one at 2 o'clock, consisting of "Jonathan Bradford," "The Spitfire," and "The Devil's Daughter;" the other at 7 o'clock, consisting of "The Gunmaker of Moscow," "The Phantom of the Wreck,' and "The French Spy."

BOWERY THEATRE.—The equestrian troupe of SANDS, NATHANS & Co., give two admirable performances to-day. Their entertainments are conducted with great care and splendor, and horsemanship in its most acceptable form can be enjoyed here.

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The attractions here are of a multitudinous character, dramatic and otherwise. There will be a performance every hour. The visitor cannot be wrong at any time.

LOUNGING PLACES.—The Exhibition of Paintings by French Artists, at No. 497 Broadway; the Exhibition of Paintings by English Artists at the Academy of Design, Eleventh-street; the Dusseldorff Gallery, No. 542 Broadway; the Crystal Palace, (machinery, statuary, &c.,) and the Panorama of Dr. KANE's Arctic Expedition, at Empire Hall.

Letter from an Officer of the Utah Expedition.

The New-Orleans Picayune has a letter from an officer of the Utah expedition, dated at the camp on the Sweetwater, in October, in which he says:

"It is truly unfortunate that the movement of the mounted troops intended for the Utah expedition has been delayed until so late in the season, as the grass on that part of the route between here and Laramie is already failing rapidly, and the animals will feel the want of it sorely. It is already so late in the season that the day before yesterday we had rain, hail and snow in the Sweetwater Valley, and the Wind River and Sweetwater ranges of mountains already glisten from peak to base like burnished silver in the sun. Though very beautiful to see, they are by no means the delectable mountains of our pilgrimage; for the snow, the beautiful, feathery snow, with its noiseless fall, is to us an enemy more dire and more to be dreaded than the hosts of the destroying angels, with BILL HICKMAN at their head. It was the snow which foiled and defeated on the plains of Russia the greatest military genius of any age, and it is, therefore an enemy not unworthy to be met and vanquished by the army of Utah on the mountain top, and in the rocky gorge and defile.

"As before stated, I have no misgiving as to the ability of the troops already in Utah, or its immediate vicinity, to force their way the present season into the valley of the Salt Lake, and to strike a mortal blow at the very heart of the Mormon abomination by the capture and destruction, if necessary, of Salt Lake City. BRIGHAM YOUNG declared to Captain VAN VLIET that the Mormons, if unable successfully to defend their city, would commit it to the flames, and retreat fighting into the mountains. Recent events have satisfied me that it is highly probable that the Mormons contemplate an exodus en masse at some time, perhaps to Vancouver's or to the Sandwich Islands. If the attack on the city were delayed until Spring, the threat above referred to might be carried into execution; but if the dire alternative is presented to them in the depth of Winter, possibly the saintly and prophetic BRIGHAM might be favored with a special revelation on the subject which might induce him to change his programme."

CORRECTION.—The price of Consols by the Vanderbilt was incorrectly printed in the morning papers The price at London on the 13th inst. was 89½@89¾, and not, as printed, 89½@90¼.

The Quarantine Station and the Commissioners of Emigration.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS FOR THE REMOVAL OF THE QUARANTINE STATION, NEW-YORK, Nov. 23, 1857.

To the Commissioners of Emigration.

GENTLEMEN: We are in receipt of a copy of a note, purporting to come from Messrs. CARRIGAN, CURTIS and GARRIGUS, (they forming a Committee of your Board to whom was referred a former Communication from us,) and which is certified by your Secretary as having been unanimously concurred in by your Board.

In reply, we herewith send you the key of the Temporary Quarantine inclosure, with our congratulations that wise counsel has prevailed in your Board, and that you have at last determined to comply with that law of the State which makes it your imperative duty to take charge of the Quarantine property, provided by us.

It is proper, moreover, for us at this time, to correct one or two misapprehensions, under which you seem to labor.

In the first place, a reference to the communication from the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller, (a copy of which we sent you,) will show that those officers, in place of "not disapproving," fully approve our action in preparing a "Temporary Quarantine;" whatever estimate you may put upon their indorsement, (which, from your flippant criticism of their acts, would seem to be a light one,) we confess to a sense of gratification, thereat, as well from their high social standing as men of intelligence and character, as from the official seal of their approbation. We must be pardoned for excepting to the taste which could dictate the following sentence in your note:

"The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller, although authorized by the Quarantine Act only to approve of the expenses, have qualifiedly approved of the buildings, and by implication recommended this commission to assume the care of them."

This distinctly charges the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Comptroller, with exceeding their powers; against such an attack, the history of those gentlemen affords ample defence, and displays as well their ability to hold their subordinates to a strict discharge of their duties, a fact, of which your letter exhibits a salutary appreciation on your part.

You speak of acceding to our request that you will assume the charge of the temporary Quarantine, in the tone of one conferring a favor. We are unfortunate in thus having an act of generosity in us construed into its opposite. We have made no request of you, but endeavored to make the intimation that we should be compelled to enforce a compliance with your duties (unless willingly rendered) as palatable as the circumstances would admit; the "request" alluded to was a notification that we should no longer continue to do your duty.

The h pefu spirit in which you look forward to a reimbursement of the outlay for the protection of the temporary quarantine buildings is certainly worthy of commendation, but we fear will scarcely find color of warrant in law; indeed, we perceive by your own admission that you have no authority whatever to take charge of the premises in question, except for the legitimate purposes of your commission, which precludes all hope of payment from any other than your lawful fund, as well as detracts somewhat from the extreme generosity of your offer, to assist the State of New-York in this emergency. The following are your words:

"All of which will be required during the approaching inclement season, aggravated as its severity [will be by the general business prostration of the country, to support the emigrants from whom it has been collected, and to whose use it has been sacredly pledged by the State."

In conclusion, it is alike gratifying to us, as we presume it must be to you, to find your Board and the Health Officer, (between whom intimate business relations necessarily exist,) acting in concert, he having long since acquiesced in our course, to the extent of his power, by adopting the anchorage designed by us, and lying adjacent to the Temporary Quarantine.

Signed: GEORGE HALL, EGBERT BENSON, O. BOWNE, } Commissioners for the removal of the Quarantine Station.

The Water-street Murder.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your impression of Monday in the report of "the Water-street murder" you lead the public to believe that Mrs. DRISCOLL was at the Tombs. This is an error. She was not at the Tombs on the occasion referred to, nor was she brought up to identify anybody.

MARK DRISCOLL.

Obituary.

From the N. O. Crescent of Oct. 26, 1857.

When an old and valued member of society is removed from among us, it is natural to pass a tribute of respect to his memory. We have had to record the decease of many old and respectable citizens within the past two or three years. We have now to chronicle the demise of RICHARD RELF, late cashier of the Louisiana State Bank, one of our oldest and most exemplary citizens. He departed this life, in the Parish of East Feliciana, on Thursday, the 22d inst., aged 82 years. Mr. RELF is a native of Philadelphia, and came to this city at the age of sixteen years, where he has resided uninterruptedly for sixty-six years. No particular disease attended his last days, only a gradual decay, as it were, of nature. Mr. RELF was from somewhere about the year 1807 to 1817 largely engaged in commercial pursuits in this city, in connection with the late BEVERLY CHEW, under the firm of CHEW & RELF. They occupied the very highest commercial and social position, subsequent to the eventful warfare in which our country was engaged from 1812 to 1815. Many reverses and general revulsion followed, in which our late respected citizen bore his share, and had to fall.

In the year 1818, the Louisiana State Bank was chartered, and Mr. RELF was elected cashier, which office he held until his death, a period of 39 years. During this long space of time, throughout the numerous changes in the direction of the bank, through all its multifarious vicissitudes. Mr. RELF held and maintained the confidence and faith of every director, and the respect of every stockholder. It is seldom in this sublunary sphere, that it falls to the lot of the historian to record so true and faithful a performance of duties. We believe that Mr. RELF was absent from the State only once in the long period of 39 years. His untiring zeal, his devotion, the faithfulness, integrity and honesty with which he fulfilled the duties of his responsible office, is an example to the rising generation, and will be long remembered. Mr. RELF was twice married and leaves numerous descendants, among whom are several occupying the highest social and commercial positions in our midst, and while we sympathize with them, we can add, that their relative descends to the tomb, full of years and ful of honors.

Late from Bermuda.

By the arrival of the brigs T. M. Mayhew and Lady Chapman, from Bermuda, we have papers from that place to the 11th inst.

The Gazette of the 11th has the following paragraph:

"We understand that Mr. ARNOLD, of the United States Army, who came passenger in the Mayhew from New-York, has been sent here by the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, to study the Natural History of Bermuda. We hope Mr. ARNOLD will receive, from those in whose power it is, every facility in prosecuting his researches."

Jamaica papers to the 26th of October had been received at Bermuda. Rains visited all parts of the Island in unusual abundance. On the night of the 11th a terrific rain and thunder-storm passed over Kingston.

Intermitting fever and yellow fever were prevailing at Jamaica.

In Demerara sugar-making was going on with great rapidity, but trade generally was dull; freights low—only £2 10s. per ton offered for a voyage to Europe.

By this arrival we have news from the City of St. Domingo to the 4th of October, which is not late, and from Santiago to the 10th. The partisans of Baez were still in possession of Samana, and according to private letter were well supplied with provisions, and prepared for a siege of any length. An additional force was about to be dispatched against them. A dispatch from the Head-quarters of SANTA ANA (Los Caymitos) claims that he is only restrained from annihilating his opponents by considerations of clemency.

Personal.

A curious will case is pending in Dallas County, Ala. Ephraim Pool, last Summer, died after a short illness, but procured the services of a friend to draw his will. By that instrument he bequeathed a fortune of $60,000 to two mulatto women and their children, his own offspring, and gave the drawer of the will a negro for his trouble, besides making him sole trustee, with direction to send these slaves to a free State. The heirs of Pool contest the will on the ground that he was of unsound mind. No decision yet.

The reasons assigned by Hon. S. A. Eliot for his declination of the nomination for the Mayoralty of Boston, are of a purely personal character—so personal that he declines mentioning them, but adds that his resolution is irrevocable.

Marine Disasters.

By letter to Elwood Walters, Esq., for Board of Underwriters.

GALVESTON, Sunday, Nov. 15.

The ship J. W. Fannin, (previously reported,) was got afloat last night, at 6 o'clock. She is now at her wharf, leaking badly; her cargo is very badly damaged. The ship Nebraska is just visible above water. We have had very bad weather for the past week.

KEY WEST, Friday, Nov. 13.

The brig Bennington, from St. Mark's for New-York, came into this port last evening in charge of wreckers, having been ashore on one of the Tortugas Islands. It has been blowing a gale for the last two days.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, Nov. 24.

A telegraphic dispatch, received to-day from Philadelphia, advises the total loss at sea of the brig Owenee, of Baltimore. She was bound from Mobile to St. Jago de Cuba. No further particulars. The O. was an A 1 brig, built here in May, 1857,—286 tons—valued at and insured at Philadelphia for $12,000.

CONDITION OF OFFICER SANGER.—It was reported yesterday to the Deputy Superintendent that officer Sanger, of the Ninth Ward, who was so severely injured on Sunday night during a row at an oyster saloon in Bleecker-street, had rallied from his state of insensibility, and that there was a favorable prospect of his recovery.

THE CANALS—BOATMEN SUFFERING.—The Lyons Republican says, the canal at Montezuma is in a sad plight, and there is but little prospect that navigation will be entirely resumed this season. The water is several feet over the towing path for about six miles through the Montezuma marsh, and several steam-tugs are towing the boats across the marsh. At one point the current is quite strong, and the tugs have all they are able to do to tow the boats across the current. Numbers of boats are floating wild upon the surface of the marsh, and snubbing to the trees or anything else that is stationery and firm enough to hold them. Canal-drivers are obliged to lead their horses round a distance of 25 miles to meet their boats at a distance of six miles from where they started. Many of the boatmen are said to be actually suffering for the necessaries of life.

Mr. LANSING BONNELL, Milwaukee,

Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes:

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

POEMS
by
WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT,
collected and arranged by the author. Illustrated with 71 designs, engraved in the highest style of art, from designs by Birket Foster, Harrison Weir, William Harvey, J. Tenniel, F. R. Pickersgill, and other eminent artists, and a Portrait of the Author, from a drawing by Lawrence. 1 volume, 8vo. Cloth antique, gilt edges, $6; or tree calf extra, $8; or ditto, antique morocco, $9.

From the Boston Transcript.

Of the classic reputation of this poet, every year more and more convinces us. Notwithstanding the fluctuations of schools and opinions in poetry, the elements of Bryant's muse survives and grows in estimation, from their eternal adhesion to love and truth. He is essentially an American poet; his subject is nature; his art pure, chaste and elevated.

To every thoughtful heart and reverent eye, "Thanatopsis," the "Waterfall," the "Hymn to Death," the Fast," "The Prairies," the "Future Life," the "Conqueror's Grave" and so many other memorable pieces inspired by meditation and the study of nature, are full of memorable significance, and are a "joy forever." We rejoice to meet them once more printed on the neutral tinted and ample page of this exquisite quarto, and interspersed with such graceful illustrations by the first artists of the day. We hazard nothing in predicting that this national souvenir will take its place among the literary and artistic treasures of every American who knows how to unite the highest pleasures of taste with the noblest intellectual recreation and patriotic sympathy.

LITERARY NOTICES.

The publishers take pleasure in acknowledging the kind reception, everywhere accorded to their periodical by the people, and, generally, by the press. The first number was, from the nature of the case, hardly a fair index of the character and resources of the Magazine. The present number exhibits a greater variety of matter, and is every way more vigorous, as well as more attractive. The future will exhibit still further improvements. To combine the greatest amount of healthful entertainment with solid information, and the most able discussion of topics of living interest, will be the constant aim of the conductors of the Atlantic.

The publishers do not agree with the common estimate of the public taste—that it is necessary, at this day, to write down to the people:—but they believe, on the other hand, that there are enough readers in this country to appreciate and pay for the best thoughts of the best writers of the times. Therefore, the Atlantic, though high in its aims, and though taking a position which cannot be shared by any existing Magazine, is offered for sale at a popular price, and appeals to the good sense and good taste of the great mass of the reading public.

For sale by all booksellers and newsmen. Price 25 cents a number, or $3 a year.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Straight-American Convention at Mozart Hall—Daniel F. Tiemann Indorsed for Mayor of New-York.

The call for the "Straight Americans" to meet at Mozart Hall last evening was promptly responded to, and at precisely 7½ o'clock there were some three hundred persons present. The meeting was a spirited one, and very brief in duration, occupying about fifteen minutes. Animated discussions were carried on around the stoves while the people were assembling, in which it was openly stated that Mayor Wood paid for the Hall; that he had offered $500 to the candidate who would run on a Straight-American ticket, and also would spend $10,000 for his election expenses. Affidavits, it was said, would be published in proof of these statements.

P. Benjamin W. Hitchcock and Stephen D. Munn took their places on the platform. Mr. Hitchcock announced that the hour had arrived for which the meeting was called, and proceeded to state that the meeting were already aware of the steps which had been taken upon the Mayoralty of the nomination by the Americans of Mr. Cooley, and of the subsequent nomination by another Convention of Mr. Tiemann. Three cheers followed the mention of Mr. Tiemann's name, which left no one in doubt of the temper of the meeting. Mr. Hitchcock endeavored to go on, but his voice could only be heard occasionally in broken sentences, such as "can't be sold"—"original principles of the American Party"—"base venality and corruption"—"Straight Americans, stand to your colors," &c. He was twitted with being a relative of Fernando Wood, and playing into his hands. One man stepped upon the platform and charged him with being "a d—d hireling," and of betraying the American cause as Judas betrayed his master for money. "Three cheers for Daniel F. Tiemann" were again given.

Mr. Price, of the Ninth Ward, was then nominated for Chairman of the meeting, and Mr. Taylorbas Secretary.

Mr. Hitchcock then rose and made a speech for "A Straight American" nomination, and was heard without interruption.

Ex-Judge Dean followed, denouncing in the strongest terms the originators of the meeting, and charging that all concerned in it were traitors to the American cause or they would stand by the party in support of Mr. Tiemann, according to its declared purpose.

Geo. W. Jones made a straight-out speech.

Isaac J. Oliver fully indorsed the action of the American Party in the course it had pursued. He gave an account of his acquaintance with Mr. Tiemann in his official character in the Board of Ten Governors, and eulogised him as an honest, capable, and most suitable man to be the Mayor of this City, and hoped he would be elected.

Mr. A. J. Brown offered the following

RESOLUTIONS:

Resolved, That the Straight-Out Americans, assembled in mass meeting in Mozart Hall, New-York City, do hereby—in opposition to the American traitor and demagogue, Fernando Wood—indorse for the Mayoralty a man of honesty and integrity; and further

Resolved, That we recognize such a gentleman in the person of the people's candidate, Daniel F. Tiemann, whom we hereby indorse.

The resolutions were carried by acclamation.

A gentleman then came forward and sung a song to the tune of the "Red, White and Blue," the audience joining in the refrain with great enthusiasm. At the close three cheers were given for Daniel F. Tiemann.

Mr. Munn gave out that the Straight Americans would meet at the corner of Eighth-street and Broadway. The motion to adjourn was made and carried, and three more cheers were given for Daniel F. Tiemann, when the crowd separated. The reporters went to the place designated by Mr. Munn, but after waiting half an hour, and seeing but two other persons, they retired.

Meeting of the American General Committee.

The American General Committee of the City of New-York met on Wednesday evening, Nov. 25, and unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the proceedings of the American Mayoralty Nominating Convention, in taking such action as paved the way and led to the union of honest men of all parties in favor of Daniel F. Tiemann as an independent, reform and citizens' candidate for Mayor, is fully sustained by the moral sense of the community at large, and is, therefore, under all the circumstances, cordially approved by this Committee, and is further recommended to the earnest support of the American party throughout the City.

Resolved, That while we have great respect for the honesty of those members of our party who hesitated long before they could yield their approval of the lead taken by the majority of their brethren, in favor of a City union of all parties in an election purely municipal, we know how to discriminate between such and the hired tools of Fernando Wood, who dare to use and try to dishonor the American name by holding pretended American meetings, with the hope to benefit a renegade from our own ranks, among whose first official acts were the dismissal of nearly 500 policemen, for no other offence than that of having been born on American soil! And we therefore, in the name of the American party, denounce as corrupt and spurious the pretended American meeting called for this evening at Mozart Hall.

Resolved, That, while we maintain respectfully but firmly in the face of the world the great distinctive national and conservative union doctrines of our party, so essential, as we believe, to the purity and permanence of our institutions, we recognize also, as good citizens, the necessity of reform, by the election of honest and capable men to office; nor will we cease our efforts in the movement now so happily inaugurated, until every record of merely partisan and corrupt legislation at Albany for State or City is expunged from the statute book.

Resolved, That the above resolutions be published and read before every Council in the City.

ZOPHAR MILLS, President.

F. C. Wagner, Thos. McKnight, } Vice-Presidents.
Cornelius Whittaker, J. L. Noyes, } Secretaries.

The First Judicial District Republican Convention met in the Fifth Ward Hotel, on Monday evening last, and nominated Jeremiah Lathrop candidate for Civil Justice. The First District comprises the First, Third and Fifth Wards.

The German Democratic electors of the Eighteenth Ward held a meeting, at No. 328 First-avenue, on Tuesday evening, and passed a preamble and resolutions repudiating Mayor Wood and indorsing the nomination of Daniel F. Tiemann.

Dr. Osgood on Labor and the Poor.

Rev. Dr. Osgood read the essay before the Young Men's Christian Union, Tuesday evening, upon the pertinent subject, "Christianity with reference to Labor and the Poor." The essayist urged the impolicy of breaking the springs of enterprise by making war upon property. It was equally wrong, by indiscriminate alms-giving, to foster the habit of improvidence. It would be well to improve the friendly relations which naturally exist between labor and capital. The motives to exertion ought to be quickened by education, moral, intellectual and practical, and, as part of this process, by the suppression of all wasteful vices. The Doctor thought it advisable to try to check all rash, speculative and excessive credits, such as necessarily bring on panics, so ruinous to labor as this through which we are passing. Excessive taxation, especially in large cities, ought to be avoided, inasmuch as ultimately it presses upon the poor in the shape of house-rent. The laborer ought to feel that he and his children share in the blessings of civilization, and may share more freely by judicious coöperation. In this relation illustrations are derivable from Mutual Insurance Societies and Savings Banks.

Another advantageous effort might be made in diffusing among the people more cheerful views of political economy, like those of our countryman, H. C. Carey, and thus practically refute the fearful forebodings of men attached to the views of the school of Malthus.

As to present remedial measures, the Rev. Doctor suggested that the people should employ all the labor that conveniently they could, and make such reasonable purchases as they could from those with whom they had been accustomed to deal. It would be well to assist all charitable associations, more especially such as are intended directly to improve the condition of the poor, such as the Children's Aid Society, and the societies for employing poor women. It was the duty of the public personally to visit so many of the actually destitute as was possible, paying great attention to more unobtrusive cases which were very numerous and whose claims were entitled to the first attention. The reverend gentleman urged it as a necessity, that Christian Churches of every sect should cultivate a more earnest spirit of active benevolence through the whole community, inculcating the sentiment that whatever is sacrificed for the amelioration of human suffering, if such sacrifice be made from a proper motive, will not ultimately fail of its reward.

LONG ISLAND.

The Murder of Samuel Carman.—We learn that a letter has been received in Queens County, from Illinois, stating that a Dutchman in that State, under arrest for theft, has confessed to the commission of a murder in Queens County, L. I., about the time of the murder of the lamented Samuel Carman. He states that he perpetrated the murder with an axe with which he fractured the back of his head. From the fact that a Dutchman had been employed by Mr. Carman, who in a dispute about a trifle of money had made threats against him a short time previous to his death, and who had suddenly disappeared, it is thought that this letter may furnish a clue to his murderer. We hope the matter will be thoroughly followed up. The county of Queens has offered $500 for the discovery of the murderer.—Brooklyn Star.

An Officer Garroted.—On Tuesday night last Deputy Sheriff John Ebeller, of Justice Voorhies' Court, Brooklyn, while passing through Bedford-avenue was attacked by two men from behind, who attempted to rob him. They gave him several severe blows about the head, but he made so determined a resistance that he finally got away from his assailants.

Committed.—Michael O'Brien, who, it is charged, attempted to kill Arthur T. Monaghan, at his store on Pearl-street, Brooklyn, last Friday night, was fully committed by Justice Cornwell, yesterday, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Singular Circumstance.—The unoccupied frame building on Seventh-avenue, near Ninth-street, Brooklyn, in which a child was murdered a few days ago, was set on fire, early yesterday morning, and destroyed.

Wednesday, Nov. 25, P. M.

The English news per steamer Vanderbilt, as telegraphed from Cape Race to the morning papers was, of course, the principal excitement on the Street to-day. The effect is favorable to the export movement of produce, and the free negotiation of exchange based thereon, both of which were threatened by the previous alarming accounts per steamer Atlantic. The news also strengthens the Stock Exchange, coming just in time to check and reverse the downward tendency in prices as manifested on Tuesday. The Share list leaves off to-day, with one or two exceptions, much the same as on Monday afternoon. The speculative sellers against New-York Central had rather the advantage at the close. The stock closed on Monday at 79½; yesterday at 77½, and after selling at 79½@79@78¾ early to-day, left off at 2 o'clock at 78 ℔ cent.; Reading 53 against 50 yesterday afternoon; Erie rose from 16 to 16⅛, closing 16⅜; Illinois Central 96; Toledo 42½ ℔ cent. State Stocks were firmer, Missouris 80, Virginias 90 ℔ cent. The January interest on the Virginia debt has been provided for—the Bank of the Republic has already received and remitted to London on the Sterling bonds, and will pay on the 1st January on the Dollar bonds. Some small parcels of Illinois State stock, of the Sterling issue, 6 ℔ cents, are offering in the market, in bonds of £225 ℔ $1,000, and the stipulation for 8 ℔ cent. exchange in New-York in lieu of the sterling coupon in London, if preferred by the American holder. This arrangement is equal to nearly 6½ ℔ cent. interest, each half yearly coupon being equivalent to $32.40 on the $1,000, instead of $30 as on the ordinary Dollar bond. In the same way, when the principal falls due, the holder receives $1080 for each $1,000. The bonds now offered are of the original issue, and to close the estate of Messrs. E. W. Clark, Dodge & Co. Tennessee six ℔ cents. brought 85 ℔ cent., and Michigans 90 ℔ cent.; Illinois Central Bonds sold at 86½ ℔ cent.; New-York Central six ℔ cents. 85 ℔ cent., and Michigan Central 8 ℔ cents. fell off to 83 ℔ cent. The general market left off steady. There was no Second Board, in consequence of the eve of Thanksgiving Day.

The revised charter of the Bank of England separates the departments of Issue and of General Banking. The former is permitted to employ £14,475,000 Government Stocks as a basis of circulation, together with nearly the entire stock of Bullion belonging to the establishment. As the Bullion rises or falls, so rise and fall the authorized issue of notes. The notes are made the legal tender in the Banking department, which usually holds only a few hundred thousand pounds in coin for the convenience of change in daily transactions. Its reserve of notes is its main dependence in granting new accommodations and in paying the checks of its depositers. These notes being nearly exhausted on the 17th November, a general suspensions of payments in the legal tender or a complete arrest of all new business by this department of the Bank, must have ensued in a day or two but for the act of grace by the Government. A summary order in Council therefore suspended the penalties of the charter to avert suspension by the Bank itself. The establishment had exhausted its power of issue and circulation. Its Bullion was locked up in the Issue Department and the public had about 95 ℔ cent. of its Notes, besides being clamorous for further accommodation at 10 ℔ cent. interest. The Banking Department was responsible for £11,000,000 private deposits, besides the public deposits of the Government, and had neither Gold nor Notes to pay with, when the Government steps in and authorizes a forced issue of Notes, not secured, as directed by charter, to meet the emergency True, the operation is in no sense a suspension o specie payments upon the legal issues of the Bank These payments continue, as usual, while the stock of Bullion locked up in the Issue Department, remains good. But like the New-York Banks, on the 13th of October, the great English establishment had not the ability to pay its deposits, in any legal tender, on the 12th November, the day succeeding the panic and day of the order in Council. Its condition one week before, Nov. 4, stood:

Notes issued	£22,422,000	Government Debt	£11,015,100
		Other Securities	3,459,900
		Gold Coin and Bullion	7,947,060
Total	£22,422,060	Total	£22,422,060

BANKING DEPARTMENT.

Proprietors' Cap'l.	£14,553,000	Government Securities	£10,120,104
Rest	3,305,579	Other Securities. (Loans.)	22,628,251
Public Deposits	4,871,944	Notes unemployed	2,155,315
Other Deposits	11,910,670	Gold and Silver Coin	550,720
Seven Day and other Bills	813,197
Total	£35,454,390	Total	£35,454,390

On the 9th and 10th there were large withdrawals of Gold, (involving, of course, the cancelation of a corresponding sum of Notes,) to aid the Banks in Scotland, and large applications for accommodation in London, which cannot have further lessened the reserve of Notes; and the weekly report of the 11th November, when received here, will probably show that the Bank was quite as nearly run down on the evening of that day as the New-York banks were on comparing specie on the evening of the 13th October. The difference of remedy is that the latter took the law into their own hands, and the ormer had the law suspended for its credit and convenience by the Queen in Council. The relief in the one case was seconded both by the public and the judiciary; in the other it was first sanctioned by the Crown, and then worked instantaneous good to the embarrassed trade and commerce of the Kingdom.

We have not the slightest purpose in these explanations to exaggerate the straits to which the English Bank was driven by the English panic, or to palliate by any unfair parallel the circumstances attending the New-York crisis. But a mere difference in the terms applicable to the two cases, cannot destroy their very close resemblance, in substance. The entire absence of distrust in the secured bank-note circulation of the country, was felt in both instances. The panic in both was among the dealers at bank. The remedy in London was to save the Bank by an expansion of the currency. A similar remedy was proposed here, with the difference in its favor that the authorized issue of the Bank Department of New-York had not been exhausted, and it was unwisely declined by the City Banks until too late to save their honor.

The extent to which the Bank of England, for the sake of its dealers and the public may avail of this privilege of expansion, is a question to be determined by subsequent arrivals. An emergency somewhat similar occurred in 1847. A like order in Council was then granted, but the mere proclamation of relief saved the Bank from an infringement of the Peel Act of 1844. Money instantaneously poured into its coffers from every quarter, and the Note Circulation was enlarged legitimately. During the late war with Russia, a similar difficulty was also threatened, but never occurred; the only provision made by the Government being the addition of £475,000 to the Public Stock security of the Issue Department. This small sum was added because the Provincial Bank circulation, authorized by the Peel Act, as high as eight millions Sterling over and above the Bullion on hand, had only averaged £7,525,000. Of the relief to the trading and banking classes of the Kingdom, there would seem to be no question, and the influence of the restoration of confidence will do a world of good on this side the Atlantic by restoring our export movement to something like consistency.

Our Money Market to-day is without alteration from the quiet and ease heretofore reported. The exact shipment of Gold by the Arabia amounted to $1,536,246. A good part of the English Coin bought up for this opportunity was not counted in the Bank average of last week, and we doubt whether the next statement, even in the absence of the California shipment of Nov. 5, now about due, will show much, if any, decline on the last figure. American Gold is worth to-day 100¼ @100½ ℔ cent. Philadelphia and Baltimore funds slightly improved.

We are enabled to state that Messrs W. Hoge & Co., and Messrs. Dutihl & Co., continue to meet their New-York engagements, notwithstanding the untoward difficulties which suddenly overtook their Liverpool connexions. Both concerns had also fully covered their engagements abroad, but a portion of their remittances were upon one of the large Anglo-American houses recently suspended.

The Sub-Treasury received to-day $85,334 paid out $131,056; balance $4,770,447.

Reform in the Currency.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your Boston correspondent, "A Subscriber," who thinks that Mr. Reynolds' plan for an improved State Currency will meet my views, is correct in his conjecture so far as it relates to a single State Department of Issue, but no further.

As I understand Mr. R.'s propositions, undoubted securities to the full amount of the currency must be deposited with the Department of Issue as banking capital, one-third of which must be bullion. He supposes that $20,000,000 of paper money would be the minimum amount in circulation in Massachusetts, even during a currency panic; and, consequently, this amount might be issued on other than specie security. If, during a severe panic, the people of Massachusetts held $20,000,000 of the promises of 173 Banks, how much more would they have held, without demanding specie, if they had had the promises of the State in their pockets instead? With a State issue, probably specie would be demanded very seldom except for legitimate purposes, and for these the supply would be abundant if not hoarded up as a basis. Mr. R. supposes that $10,000,000 of bullion, added to $20,000,000 of other securities, would be sufficient for the banking capital of Massachusetts. At 6 ℔ cent. this would realize $1,800,000 ℔ annum, from which the bankers would receive no return except $30,000,000 of currency, whose cost of preparation Mr. R. estimates at $100,000, showing the cost to the bankers to be $1,700,000 over and above what it might be. Above capital, at 1 ℔ cent. tax, would be only $300,000. But if undoubted securities would command a premium when wanted for a basis, the cost would be proportionally greater, and besides, the Department might be necessitated to provide specie to meet a run at a considerable sacrifice, and this sacrifice would be a measure of the baseless issue, and for this the State would be responsible. Though a State Issue would inspire confidence, yet political mischiefmakers might take advantage of a system which would invite their attentions. While $30,000,000 of a circulating medium would cost the bankers $1,800,000 ℔ annum, the Department could only collect $1,200,000, being interest on two-thirds, the other one-third being worse than dead capital, because it would involve an expense of transmission to the place of deposit, and require expensive accommodation when there; otherwise it might be removed and a mob "take the responsibility." Specie payment on demand has proved "a mockery, a delusion and a snare;" though it has always succeeded except when tested. If $20,000,000 of paper money would be absorbed, why not allow the bankers to circulate $10,000,000 of specie, and thereby not only save the cost of preparing that amount of paper, but also save the people from demanding that amount for notes? More than that, it would satiate them, unless the visit of a future currency-comet would be more disastrous than that of the one whose tail yet whisks us. The plan in question has this objectionable specie element, as well as the provision adopted by the National Banks on the other side of the Atlantic, for producing a contraction just at the time that an expansion is needed, which reminds one of the means to which the old philosopher resorted, who, in order to divert his attention from a very painful wound, inflicted a more severe one in close proximity. I cannot see the justice of placing such a ruinous burden on the banking capital for the purpose of lessening other people's taxes, nor can I see how the bankers would be compensated for this great loss, by a repeal of the usury laws, enabling them to earn 7 instead of 6 ℔ cent., because the difference would be only $300,000; but under the same rule the funds invested would be worth 7 ℔ cent., especially when the current rate of interest would average 8 or 9 ℔ cent. Then the cost of $30,000,000 of currency would be $2,100,000, and the gross earnings of the same capital, constantly employed, would be $2,100,000, thus leaving the deposits to earn all dividends and expense of management. I admit, however, that if the principle be just and the calculation correct, my not seeing will not alter either. To make the currency a legal tender in the hands of everybody, except in those of the Issue Department, would obligate it to receive interest on the pledged securities in that which it could not offer, legally, in the discharge of its own obligations, yet it could not touch the gold pledged as security, even to pay the surplus into the State Treasury. Mr. R. complains of the evils resulting from hoarding specie in State or National Treasuries, yet I fear this system would not tend to lessen the cause of complaint. What is wanted is a cheap, reliable, uniform currency, and plenty of it—all of which can be furnished by a single Department of Issue authorized to pledge the faith of the State, so far as properly secured; and that, too, without a dollar of specie to provoke a run. Look at the amount that would be saved in engraving, assorting and exchanging, in storing millions of idle—worse than idle—specie capital kept for paying on demand, except when demanded. Under such a currency as that indicated in my former communication, State stocks and public securities generally would pass into the hands of citizens instead of seeking a market in Europe; and the net gain would be the difference between the interest and the bare expenses of the Issue Department; and domestic manufacturers would be better able to compete with foreign. What is the use of 20 or 30 ℔ cent. of protective duty if the manufacturer has to pay from 1 to 5 ℔ cent. ℔ month for his capital? This system, I think, would leave the Usury laws high and dry, and run the Protective Tariff ashore. R. H.

The Cotton Trade.

From Wright's Weekly Circular.

Per Arabia.] New-York, Wednesday, Nov. 25, 1857.

Since my circular of 17th inst., we have received the accounts per Niagara and Atlantic, the latter with dates to 11th November. The Bank of England had advanced the rate of discount to 9, and afterwards to 10 ℔ cent. Some important failures among merchants in London, Liverpool, Manchester and Glasgow, including two Scotch banks, were made known to us. Two weeks' later news from India had been received giving confirmation to the idea previously entertained, that the mutiny was virtually suppressed. Consols were higher, closing at 89@89¼; money matters worse.

Cotton at Liverpool had declined over one penny sterling ℔ lb.; some sales were made on the 11th November of Middling Orleans at 6¾d., and Middling Fair Mobile at 7d. ℔ lb.; prices were ent rely nominal and sales almost suspended. Short time in the Cotton manufacturing districts was general, owing to the utter prostration of business. Breadstuffs and all kinds of produce were lower. In fact, these steamers give us more disastrous news than any arrival since 1847.

My last circular quoted our Cotton market as once more brought to a complete stand by the unfavorable tenor of the advices per Niagara. The transactions have since been on the smallest possible scale, and at irregular prices. Since the arrival of the Atlantic nothing has been done to test the market, and quotations for the time are out of the question.

The sales since 16th inst. to last evening, are estimated at 1,500 bales, and the clearances during same time have been 837 bales, all for Liverpool.

Cotton in Transitu.—There has been an increase in the supply of samples of floating Cotton, but only one sale of Middling Orleans at 12c., with freight at ¾d. ℔ lb., has come to my knowledge. Very little is offered, and the greater part of the purchases so far made this season, will probably go forward on owners' account.

Southern Markets have all been active during the week under review, at full and advancing prices. The buying has been chiefly on English account, with some limited quantity for France and the Continent. The unfavorable news per Niagara did not produce the slightest effect in New-Orleans, but on the contrary the market gradually hardened, until 12c. was again reached for Middling. Upon receipt of the news per Atlantic, however, a decided effect was produced; the decline on Monday in New-Orleans was ⅛c.@¼c. ℔ lb., with sales of only 1,200 bales. At Charleston, Savannah, and all the interior markets of Georgia, South Carolina, and Alabama, a panic is described as prevailing; prices at once gave way ½c. @¾c. ℔ lb., without leading to much business.

Crop.—A killing frost is reported throughout South Carolina, Georgia, some portions of Alabama and Florida, as well as in Tennessee, and probably in upper Mississippi, though of the latter we have as yet no definite information. So far as heard from, very little importance is attached to the frosts in the localities where it was experienced, coming as it does at so advanced a period of the season; and the estimate of the crop by most parties, resident in the Atlantic cities, has been raised to 3,250,000 bales. From New-Orleans we learn that in the country tributary to that city, the crops have done well, and a large increase over last year is confidently expected. We have no information, so far, of the occurrence of frost in the Southwestern portion of the great cotton district.

Receipts during the week are slightly increased, but still below the comparison with former years. Next week we shall show larger receipts, as we know by telegraph that at Mobile and New-Orleans an increase during the week ending last Friday had taken place.

Exports continue on a fair scale considering the obstacles. To Great Britain the excess over last year is 29,000 bales. To France there is already a large falling off, and to other foreign ports a slight one.

The following is a statement of the movement in Cotton since the 1st September as compared with the previous four years:
